

LOYALISTS HOLD MARITIME AFTER TERRIFIC ASSAULT; FRENCH PREPARED TO SEND ARMS TO SPAIN

Business Gain Best In Six-Year Period, Says Reserve Bank

Monthly Review Declares "Improvement in Domestic Conditions Has Continued To Be Principal Phase of Recovery."

INCREASE IS CITED IN FOREIGN TRADE

Decline in Unemployment Is Also Reported With Steady Upturns in Dividend Payments.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)— Reporting that business this year shows "the cumulative effects of continued recovery," the Federal Reserve Board said today that "the current level of activity is higher than at any time since 1930."

Citing numerous favorable factors, the board said in its monthly bulletin that "improvement in domestic conditions has continued to be the principal phase of recovery, but exports, particularly of industrial products, have also increased."

Since 1932, it said, the country's merchandise foreign trade has increased about 60 per cent but still
"is only half as large as in 1929."

"Imports have increased more than exports," the board continued,
"and in the 12 months ending September 30, 1936, the export balance amounted to $136,000,000, as compared with $225,000,000 in the previous 12 months and with $288,000,000 in the calendar year 1932, when the total volume of trade was much smaller."

Decrease in Unemployment.
The board reported that unemployment has been on the decline "but is still large."

Long-range reasons for the continuance of unemployment in the face of sharply expanding output, it added, include growth of population and the progress of technological improvements. The board said:

"In the past two years larger increases in production than in employment have been one part in part to increases in the average number of hours worked, which have been reflected in expanding pay rolls. It appears that at present the amount of

Leap From Fire Fatal To LaGrange Woman

LAGRANGE, Ga., Nov. 8.—(AP)— Mrs. Otis Williams, employee of the Troup county Board of Health, died today of injuries received when she leaped from the second floor of the fire swept courthouse here last Thursday.

Trapped in the upper floor, Mrs.
Williams, 41, jumped and struck a ledge, suffering a fractured skull, a broken arm and a broken leg.

She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Carl Perry, of La-Grange; a son, Harold Williams, Mil-stead, and a sister, Mrs. J. C. Turner, of Laurens, S. C.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. with the Rev.
A. E. Dallas, pastor of the LaGrange Presbyterian church, officiating. Mrs.
Dallas will be assisted by the Rev.
Willie Howard, pastor of the First Baptist church.

PEACE MANEUVERS IN 'FAMILY FIGHT' OF A. F. L. COLLAPSE

John L. Lewis, President of United Mine Workers, Refuses To Meet Green To End Quarrel.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8.—(AP)— Week-end peace maneuvers in the American Federation of Labor big family quarrel collapsed tonight when John L. Lewis declined to meet William Green.

Only last night, Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the committee for industrial organization, asked Green for a conference to talk peace terms.

Green, federation president, replied he would gladly meet Lewis but lacked authority to "change the policy outlined by the executive council."

Lewis then shot back this answer:
"Under such circumstances a conference between you and the undersigned would be futile."

"When the American Federation of Labor decides to reverse and rectify its outrageous act of suspension and is ready to concede the right of industrial organization to live and grow in the unorganized industries it will be time to discuss and arrange the details of a re-established relationship."

A Social Affair.
Talking to reporters, Lewis said:
"A meeting under the circumstances would be merely a social affair. Under the circumstances now I have no desire to meet him socially."

Lewis' miners and pipe other unions in the committee for industrial organization were suspended from the federation September 5 for trying to bring all the workers in each big mass production industry into one union, without A. F. of L. sanction. Craft unions who think that workers generally should be organized along craft lines control the A. F. of L.

Pressure from the International Ladies' Garment Workers and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers was said in usually well-informed quarters to have been responsible for the federation's peace gesture.

Committee Was Named.
At the military workers request, the federation's executive council several weeks ago named a committee to start peace negotiations. The Lewis committee was willing. The

Barrymore and Elaine Are Married in Yuma

YUMA, Ariz., Nov. 9 (Monday)— (AP)—John Barrymore, 55-year-old actor, and his 21-year-old protegee, Elaine Barrie, were married here today a few minutes after midnight, after an airplane flight from Los Angeles.

The stormy romance—it once involved a cross-country chase—culminated in a quiet ceremony performed by Justice of the Peace Earl A. Freeman at his home. Witnesses were Miss Barrie's parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Louis Jacobs, who reached Los Angeles by airplane from New York, with the bride-to-be, yesterday.

TENSION LESSENS IN MARINE STRIKE ON PACIFIC COAST

Unions Decide To Release Perishable Cargoes and Return Strikebound Vessels to Home Ports.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—(AP)— Tension lessened on the maritime strike front tonight as the result of the unions' decision to ease the plight of stranded passengers and release perishable cargoes in some western ports.

The joint strike committee recommended that their membership return strikebound vessels to home ports.
This promised relief for 600 stranded passengers and 900 strikers in Honolulu as well as for hundreds of maritime men idle in Atlantic and Gulf
ports.

Local unions decided to unload perishable cargo on idle ships here and urged fellow workers at other coast points to do likewise.

The matter of unloading a consig-ment of bananas from the liner California at San Pedro remained an issue, however, when union leaders declined to be the time being the invitation of Chief Deputy United States Marshal
Ray Russell to handle the cargo.

Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick yesterday ordered the marshal to discharge the cargo on petition of the consignee.

Meeting Awaited.
Union leaders declined to aid Russell pending a meeting of the unions to decide whether to handle all strike-bound perishables there.

Encouraged by the union moves, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F.
McGrady resumed efforts to bring strikers and shipowners into new peace negotiations designed to "start from scratch."

Peace negotiations have failed repeatedly since the strike began October

CRIPPLED VESSEL LOST IN ATLANTIC

British Liner Queen Mary Assisting in Search for Hamburg-American Isis.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The Hamburg-American ship Isis, which does not carry passengers, reported floundering and awash, was the object of a search off Land's End tonight by the British liner Queen Mary and the German ship Westerland.

The last position given for the crippled ship, contained in her marine log, was reported as being 60 miles west of Land's End. The ship was reported as having been hit by a submarine and the forecastle ahead was awash.

The captain of the Westerland, searching the area in vain, said he found neither Isis nor any lifeboats.
The Isis was reported as being hit by a major conflict. But upon it depends many and fundamental facts.
It must keep alive in the nation a knowledge of the military art, and of progressive developments in tactics
and weapons.

"It must provide the defensive garrisons for our outposts in the insular possessions and the Panama Canal.
It must furnish instructors for the civilian components. And it should be capable in war of throwing up a protective wall under cover of which our citizen force can be mobilized."

Vets' Are Cited.
Asserting that increasing age of World War veterans renders obvious the need of a trained enlisted reserve, Craig added:

"In former years the veterans of the late war were of such age as to be capable of rendering active service.
Only to a limited extent is this true today. So it seems imperative that we take some steps to remedy the situation."

Roosevelt Landslide Viewed As Big Blow to Communism

Distinguished Canadian Economist, Leacock, Says Election Proves Democracy Works and Will Have Salutary Effect on Entire World; Sees New Trend.

An appraisal of the world effect of the sweeping victory of the Roosevelt administration is presented by the distinguished economist of McGill University, Montreal. Among Mr. Leacock's recent books are "Afternoons in Utopia" and "Back to Prosperity."

By STEPHEN LEACOCK.
(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 8.—It is no exaggeration to say that the triumphant re-election of Franklin D.
Roosevelt to the presidency of the United States is a world event—not the fact that he is re-elected, but the manner of it, the sweep of it, the vast impressive unanimity of it. It is full of meaning not only for democracy in America but for democracy all over the world. It throws a light forward on things to come, on the path to be trodden. It is daylight in a wood.

All honor goes to the victor. But one cannot help feeling also a thrill of admiration for the defeated candidate, Governor Landon, for his splendid and unselfish message of congratulation; and for the fact that, according to the press dispatches, he now proposes to "go duck hunting." Roosevelt will resume again the heavy burden of the New Deal, and Landon will go "duck hunting." I think I know which one I envy. Let's all go . . .

It is a fine gesture for Democracy;
nothing better since Cincinnati, the Roman, went back to the plow.

I wish that Governor Landon could take some of the strutting postures of Europe duck hunting with him, and teach them the peace and good-will that alone can consolidate a nation.

The election itself, as seen by an onlooker from the outside, was a thing to view and admire; the aspect of so vast a contest, with so little the rancor of a great nation locked in a titanic political struggle yet never breaking beyond the boundaries of the law, and in the end, acquiescing with one voice in the decision of the majority, renews our faith in the merits of government by a popular vote.
Those of us who had begun to doubt it—and I have been one—must think about it more. Perhaps we were wrong. I generally am.

But the great significance of the election lies in its bearing on social policy. Its political aspect is of purely national and internal interest, not for the world at large. Will there be a Republican party? Or will a Republicanism henceforth only mean something you find if you go goose hunting in the woods?

ARMY HEAD SEEKS LARGER RESERVE

General Craig Asks New Fighting Men Available in Time of Emergency.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—
Satisfied with the regular army's progress toward modernization, General Malin Craig, chief of staff, today recommended the establishment of a large new reserve of fighting men, available in time of emergency.

In his annual report for the fiscal year ended last June, the army's topranking officer advocated creation of an enlisted reserve to augment the national guard and officers reserve corps as components which would be called upon to expand the regular army to full defensive strength in event of war.

Craig contrasted the American military force, which he described as one designed solely for defense and unsuitable for aggression, with foreign armies "now in the course of vast expansion."

"We may describe the type of the latter establishments as that of a fusible machine, ready for instant use, within or without the borders of the country," he said. "In contrast, ours is an unfinished and an unbalanced machine. Some of its parts are not in existence, some exist as rough forgeries, others in semi-finished form.
Only a few are in a condition for immediate use."

Merely Nucleus.
"Our regular army is merely the nucleus of the war-time establishment which we must have in the event of a major conflict. But upon it depends many and fundamental facts.
It must keep alive in the nation a knowledge of the military art, and of progressive developments in tactics
and weapons."

"It must provide the defensive garrisons for our outposts in the insular
possessions and the Panama Canal.
It must furnish instructors for the civilian components. And it should be capable in war of throwing up a protective wall under cover of which
our citizen force can be mobilized."

MOVE UNDER WAY TO 'TIGHTEN UP' NEUTRALITY LAWS

Demands for High Tax on War Profits, Stricter Arms Embargo To Be Sought in New Senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—
Given impetus by developments abroad, a move was under way today to hurriedly tighten at the forthcoming session of congress the neutrality law of the United States.

Bills intended to bulwark existing safeguards against United States involvement in foreign-originated war were expected in the opening weeks of the seventy-fifth congress, usually well-informed senate circles said.

With part of the present neutrality law expiring May 1, liberal senators were expected to demand a more drastic measure, supplemented with a far-reaching tax program to take the profit out of war.

Amendment Probable.
Amendment of the present act was held highly probable, since it does not apply to internal conflicts such as the Spanish revolution.

American citizens now are forbidden to sell arms or loan money to "the government of any belligerent country," but are left legally free to trade with either side in a civil war.

The "moral embargo" unofficially invoked by the administration is believed, however, to have prevented any major munitions shipments to Spain.
Senators Nye, Republican, North Dakota, and Clark, Democrat, Missouri, members of the munitions investigating committee, are expected to lead with either side in the consideration of a new neutrality measure.

It may call for a "mandatory embargo," one senate source predicted privately, which would automatically forbid American arm shipments from the moment the first gun is fired in a war.

U. S. SHIPS TO GET DIRECT SUBSIDIES

Maritime Commission Substitutes New Plan for Mail Contract System

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—
Acting under the broad new ship subsidy law and with a fund of more than a hundred million dollars, the Maritime Commission moved today to substitute direct subsidies for existing ocean mail contracts.

As a first step, the commission is sued regulations under which holders of the present mail contracts may apply for adjustment and settlement with a view to sharing in the new subsidy program.

Under the law, existing contracts must be terminated by next June 30.
In its regulations today, the board said applications for adjustment of mail contracts must contain profit and loss and other financial reports, a statement claimed still due under the contracts, a report of the age and general physical condition of vessels operated and a summary of plans for replacements.

Applicants also were ordered to file preliminary proposals for operation under direct subsidies.

These subsidies—based directly upon the differences between American and foreign construction and operating costs—will be granted by the commission after mail contracts have been adjusted.

The commission has about $100,000, 000 in cash turned over by the postoffice department and the Shipping Board Bureau with which to begin its program. In addition, it has about $87,000,000 of notes receivable formally held by the shipping board.

Under the new program, the American merchant marine is expected to be placed on a par with those of foreign nations. Shipping board officials have expressed the opinion that it may make possible new construction totaling as much as $500,000,000 during the next six years.

Government Ready To Abrogate Pact If England Agrees

Paris Declaration Creates Consternation in British Official Circles and Comes as a Complete Surprise to Whitehall.

LONDON AWAITING BLUM SPEECH TEXT

Government's Allegiance to Franco-Soviet Mutual Armed Assistance Agreement Reaffirmed.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Premier Leon Blum told a Socialist meeting today he was ready to scrap the non-intervention agreement and supply arms and munitions to the Spanish Madrid government if Britain would agree to join France.

(Blum's declaration created consternation in British official circles.
Whitehall awaited a text of the speech before acting.)

Speaking before the Socialist National Council on the problem of helping the Spanish government, the premier said: "If concerted action with England is possible, I am ready to undertake it."

The council in a closing resolution which was passed by a big majority, said: "Concerning the events in Spain, the national council expresses its confidence in Leon Blum and asks the government put into effect in accord with England the resolution of the Socialist International and the Communist Workers' International."

(This resolution was passed October 26 by the Socialist and Communist internationals and labor organizations in which they agreed to coordinate efforts to supply the Spanish government in Madrid with arms and munitions.)

The premier said assurance by England that she would stand by France would "make French aid to the republican cause a political and moral obligation of the French government possible."

Lack of assurance of English aid, he intimated, had been one reason that France proposed signing the European non-intervention agreement.

"We would allow the working class to walk into a blind adventure," he said. "If a general war had come along we would have found ourselves alone with Russia."

The premier did not say whether there had been negotiations with Britain or whether any were planned.

Indications Blum's remarks indicated a firmer stand by the government in its foreign policy were seen also in

Washington Embassy Of Nazis Under Guard

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Police Captain James Bobo said tonight a one-man guard had been placed at the German embassy here today after the embassy heard rumors an anti-Nazi demonstration was being planned here.

Bobo said he understood reports of the planned demonstration came to the embassy from New York.

(The German embassy in London was attacked last Thursday night in a demonstration against the execution of Edgar Andre, a Communist.)

Starting at 8 a. m. today patrolmen, working one at a time in eight-hour shifts, paced the driveway in front of the red brick home, and office of Ambassador Hans Lohr.
Bobo said the guard would be continued tomorrow.

Cobb Says: Travel Is--Flattening

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Nov. 8.— Three weeks ago, everybody on this train was talking politics. Today, everybody nearly is talking football. Exceptions noted thus far:
First, A middle-aged lady talking symptoms. It seems she has had practically everything except lockjaw. And as for operations—well, her whole life must have been an open book. I gather she never had a secret that was not shared with at least three doctors.

Second, a gentleman connected

LIBERAL REPUBLICANS PLAN PARTY REFORMFish Accuses President of Partisanship in Choice of Conference Delegates.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Leaders of the Progressive Republican committee which campaigned for President Roosevelt's re-election proposed today a meeting in Washington in January

"to save the Republican party from passing into history." The conference would aim to transfer control of the Republican party from the reactionary Republicans to the progressive Republicans, said a letter signed by Roscoe S. Conklin, chairman, and Mrs. Helen Walker Homan, vice chairman and treasurer of the committee.

Among those urged to attend were Senators Norris, of Nebraska; Johnson, of California; Borah, of Idaho; Nye, of North Dakota, and Norbeck, of South Dakota; Ralph Beaver Strassburger, of Pennsylvania; George Henry Payne, of New York, and former Governor Winant, of New Hampshire.

A letter, sent to a large number of progressive Republicans, said:

"Already, Mr. Hillis (Charles D.

HILLIS, New York Republican national committeeman and Mr. Pew (J. Howard Pew, of Philadelphia) are talking of reorganization, not realizing that what the voters decided on Tuesday was not their reorganization but their elimination."

FISH ACCUSES F. D. R. OF PARTISAN CHOICE
WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Accusing the administration of an "autocratic and partisan attempt to make a political football out of foreign affairs," Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., Republican, New York, said today he would block any unanimous consent requests for appropriations to send American delegates to international conferences.

"The appointment by President Roosevelt of a host of deserving Democrats to represent the United States at the Pan-American peace conference at Buenos Aires, Argentina," Fish said in a statement, "raises a challenge which the Republican party cannot avoid with any self-respect."

"Under Republican administrations the minority party was always represented at all such conferences and on every peace delegation."

"The failure of the President to select any Republican is just another indication that he does not want the co-operation of the Republican party on international relations and proposes to run our foreign policies on a purely partisan basis, contrary to American tradition and custom."

Fish is the ranking Republican on the house foreign affairs committee. Legislation, including appropriations acts, and resolutions, often are enacted without a formal vote by the unanimous consent of all members present.

DAY TO GUIDE CORNELL.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Election of Dr. Edmund Ezra Day, internationally known social scientist and economist, as the fifth president of Cornell University was announced today. The 33-year-old New Englander will assume office next June 30.

HIGH COURT TO HEAR
PUBLIC UTILITY SUIT

27 Opinions To Be Rendered Before Justices Weigh New Deal Case.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Eight of the supreme court's nine justices will listen tomorrow to arguments on the first of a series of cases involving New Deal legislation to come before this term of the high tribunal.

The ninth—Justice Harlan Stone—is expected to be absent from the bench because of a protracted illness. Friends said the liberal jurist, convalescing from dysentery, probably would follow argument in the cases from the briefs and could vote on decisions unless a relapse into serious illness occurred.

After handing down a maximum of 27 opinions tomorrow, the court will turn its attention to the first of five arguments concerning New Deal laws. The initial argument will involve the government's effort to postpone action by lower tribunals on cases challenging the constitutionality of the public utility holding company act until a final decision is obtained on proceedings it has filed against the Electric Bond & Share Company.

On Tuesday, the court will hear opposing contentions concerning the rights of the government to make loans and grants for publicly-owned hydroelectric projects. The Duke Power Company filed the appeal from a ruling by the circuit court of appeals at Charlotte, N. C., upholding a PWA loan and grant to Greenwood county, N. C., for a project at Buzzard Roost.

Next week there will be arguments on the 50 per cent tax imposed on profits made before the silver purchase act became effective, an embargo on shipments of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay for their Chaco War, and the Ashurst-Summers act requiring the labeling of prison-made goods.

A final decision on some or all of these disputes may come December 7. Three other New Deal cases probably will be argued in December, with decisions in January or February. These involve the Wagner labor relations act and the railway labor act, which guarantee collective bargaining to workmen, and a question as to whether the congressional resolution barring payment of obligation in gold applied to rental contracts.

Already the court has agreed to review two cases challenging the Wagner act, it is expected to announce tomorrow whether it will add three others for joint decision.

During the past two weeks the court has been in recess preparing opinions for delivery tomorrow, none of which have to do with New Deal legislation. On November 29 it will start another opinion-writing recess.

Labor Head Will Speak

RAIL CLERKS' LEADER WILL VISIT ATLANTA

Federation Vice President
To Deliver Public Address Friday Night.

George M. Harrison, of Washington, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor and one of the most important labor executives in the United States, will pay an official visit to the 11 Atlanta locals of the B. of R. C. Friday, climaxing his visit with a public address Friday night at the Shrine mosque.

Mr. Harrison recently completed an assignment as chairman of the labor division of the finance committee of the Democratic national committee.

Mr. Harrison's address will be at 8 o'clock and a number of prominent city, county and state officials are expected to attend. There are more than 2,000 members in the local lodges of the brotherhood.

The Atlanta locals yesterday announced the appointment of the following committee heads to work out the program for Mr. Harrison's visit:

O. L. Kelly, chairman, general committee; H. S. Hitchcock, secretary, general committee; T. R. Blackmar, chairman, program committee; R. F. Chance, chairman, publicity committee; J. E. Miller, chairman, housing committee.

The following will serve on the general committee: J. G. Sisk, T. F. Barber, C. C. Skelton, B. B. Moore, W. E. Fincher, W. B. Edelo, C. L. Gross, W. H. Wells, William H. Joyner, C. S. Barrett, C. P. White, M. E. Vining, J. C. Thomas, A. P. Furr, W. G. Williamson, W. D. Martin and Wayne D. Smith.

Bailey, adjutant general; Lieutenant Colonel Walter H. Hyde, Q. M. C., United States property and disbursing officer, and Lieutenant Colonel J. Frank Richmond, senior instructor, Nashville.

B. T. U. SECRETARY
TO REPORT GAINS

Baptist Leaders Will Gather for Conference in Macon Wednesday.

Edwin S. Preston, state secretary of the Baptist Training Union department of the Georgia Baptist convention, will report a substantial increase in the number of unions with membership of more than 52,000 young people at the approaching session of the Georgia Baptist convention November 17-19, at Savannah. This department has issued 11,122 awards during the year, leading the 18 states of the Southern Baptist convention for the month of September.

Mr. Preston further announces a statewide conference of leaders of Baptist Training Union work to be held in Macon Wednesday, when Dr. Clay L. Hudson, of Nashville, and other outstanding leaders will have part on the program. In March of next year, another statewide conference of associational workers in this department will be held at Beale Tift College. The annual state assembly of young Baptists will be held at Shorter College in June. Grady Lee, of Atlanta, is president of the Baptist Training Union convention of Georgia.

ATLANTA ROTARY CLUB
TO HEAR HARRIS TODAY

Joel C. Harris Jr., governor of the 60th district of Rotary International, will make his official visit to the Atlanta Rotary Club today, speaking before the club at 12:30 o'clock at the Capital City Club.

Mr. Harris will relate to the Atlanta club the progress of Rotary International and Rotary in the 60th district. During his term of office, Mr. Harris will pay an official visit to every Rotary group in the 60th district.

GAMMON FOUNDER
DIES IN NEW YORK

Rev. W. P. Thirkield Headed Seminary Here for Seventeen Years.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The Rev. Wilbur Patterson Thirkield, 82, a retired bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, died last night in the Brooklyn Methodist Episcopal hospital after an illness of several weeks.

Bishop Thirkield, who retired in 1928, was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University and from the Boston University Theological College.

In 1893 he founded and was the first president of Gammon Theological Seminary at Atlanta, and remained there 17 years.

In 1906 he became president of Howard University at Washington.

In 1912 he was elected a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church and subsequently served in the New Orleans, Mexican, South American and Chattanooga areas.

In 1928 he became chairman of the committee on music and worship of the Methodist Episcopal church and for several years also headed the same committee in the federal council of churches of Christ in America.

VIENNA, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, arrived tonight for preliminary discussions before the conference of the Rome protocol nations beginning November 11.

CABARET PATRON SHOT.
NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Four bandits held up 3 patrons of a Brooklyn cabaret early today, telling them to keep quiet and "act natural" and fatally wounded a 56-year-old man who entered the resort with his wife and thought it was all a joke.

HARVEY HANNAH DIES
AT TENNESSEE HOME

Veteran Political Leader
Once Nominated Cordell
Hull for President.

OLIVER SPRINGS, Tenn., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Harvey H. Hannah, veteran of almost half a century of political campaigning in Tennessee and for 30 years a member of the state railroad and public utilities commission, died at his home here today. He was 68.

Chairman of the commission since 1922, Hannah had served as president of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners four years ago. He was a close associate of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, whose political career, like Hannah's, had its inception in Tennessee late in the last century.

They served in the Spanish-American War together in Cuba, Hull as captain and Hannah as a lieutenant colonel.

At the Democratic national convention at Houston, Texas, in 1928, Hannah nominated Hull for president. At the earlier San Francisco convention he had nominated L. D. Tyson, later a United States senator from Tennessee, for vice president.

The death of Hannah followed closely one of the few election defeats of his life and the only one of recent years. In August he lost to Leon Jourmon Jr., of Knoxville, the race for the Democratic nomination to the utilities commission.

For nearly a year before the race Hannah had been ill of an ailment that caused him to spend much time under treatment and he did not take the stump. It was the first time in years that his gifts of oratory had not been engaged in behalf of his candidacy.

Hannah died at 12:30 p. m. He had been unconscious for more than a week. Several months ago he underwent an operation which he had never entirely recovered.

JOSEPH C. CLARK, 43,
EX-PATROLMAN, DIES

Atlanta Patrolman and a Resident of Ellenwood since his retirement from the police force in 1923, died yesterday at a private hospital here. Mr.
Clark joined the police force in 1916 and served seven years, retiring because of ill health.

He is survived by his wife; two sons, J. C. Clark Jr., and Corbett Clark; three daughters, Mildred, Margaret and Inez Clark; his mother, Mrs. Laura Clark; a brother, J. Allen Clark, Atlanta, and a sister, Mrs. George E. Kuglar, of Augusta.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Orchard Knob Baptist church, with the Rev. W. B. Carr and Walter Eubanks officiating.

Nephews who will act as pallbearers include Robert, William and John Spivey, Joe McArthur, Claude Anderson and Ralph Bowman.

Place of burial will be announced by Awtry & Lowndes.

TOLL OF 88 LIVES REPORTED FOR NATION.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

At least 61 persons lost their lives in automobile mishaps throughout the nation over the week-end.

In two separate Indiana accidents, the captain of the football team at Butler University died, and the captain of the basketball team was critically injured.

The Census Bureau at Washington reported that in the first 44 weeks of the year automobile fatalities in 136 leading cities in the nation totaled 7,579, as compared with 7,992 for the same period last year.

A Tulsa, Okla., taxi company announced the inauguration of a service in which two men are sent out to take care of the party-going patron too intoxicated to drive—one to drive him home and the other to drive his car home for him.

Week-end auto deaths by states: Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 2; California, 6; Connecticut, 3; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Idaho, 1; Illinois, 8; Indiana, 5; Kansas, 2; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 1; Maine, 3; Michigan, 2; Minnesota, 2; Missouri, 1; New Jersey, 4; New York, 4; Ohio, 4; Oklahoma, 3; Oregon, 3; Pennsylvania, 8; Rhode Island, 1; Tennessee, 4; Utah, 1; Virginia, 4; Washington, 6; West Virginia, 1.

4 SERIOUSLY INJURED IN WEEK-END MISHAPS

Several Others Suffer Minor Hurts in Traffic Accidents Here.

Four Atlantans were sent to hospitals critically injured and a number of others were hurt in a wave of traffic accidents which swept over the city yesterday and late Saturday night.

Alvin McLaughlin, 16, of 1308 Bankhead avenue, at Grady hospital, possible fracture of the skull.

Joe Scott, 24, of 728 Spring street, Grady hospital, possible fracture of the skull and a fractured jaw.

Lester Waldrop, 18, of 209 Williams street, fractured skull and other injuries, Grady hospital.

Joe Streeter, negro, of 345 Hunter street, fractured collarbone, broken left leg and possible internal injuries, admitted to Grady.

Young McLaughlin, attempting to stop his bicycle near his home, applied his brakes too suddenly and was thrown to the pavement. Eddie Bailey, 18, of 1292 Bankhead avenue, also riding on the bicycle, was unhurt.

Scott and Waldrop were injured at North avenue and Williams street yesterday morning. Scott was seated on a parked motorcycle talking to Waldrop when an automobile driven, according to police, by Bill Glosion, 29, of 253 Luckie street, crashed into them. The two were hurled 75 feet into the air.

Glosion was charged with drunken driving and held without bond.

Joe Streeter was struck at 4 o'clock yesterday morning on Fair street by a hit-and-run driver.

Two cars collided shortly after noon yesterday at Bankhead and English avenues. One was driven, police reported, by I. E. Everett Little, of Julian street, and the other by Oscar Smith, 20, of 90-12 Piedmont avenue. Both drivers were charged with reckless driving.

Two occupants of the Minor car, Mrs. Martha Minor, 72, and Mrs. Charles Weldon, 70, of an English avenue address, were slightly hurt.

In an accident near Stone Mountain yesterday afternoon, Mrs. L. C. Harrison, of Carrollton, suffered a fracture of the arm and cuts and bruises, and Miss N. D. Nour, 14, of Stone Mountain, sustained cuts and bruises. Both were treated at Grady hospital and dismissed. Details of the accident were not available.

A car driven by Everett Little, of Decatur, turned over several times on Columbia drive Saturday night, when it brushed against another car driven by Joe Jones, of Glenwood avenue, police reported.

Little, Mrs. R. E. Little, Mrs. R. H. Little and H. C. Hopkins, all of Decatur, were admitted to Emory University hospital. Their condition was reported last night as not serious.

J. W. Evans, 48, of Waycross, Ga., was slightly injured last night when he was struck by an automobile while driving, according to police, by Spencer Wicks, 24, of Flat Shoals road. The accident occurred at Marietta street and Howell Mill road. Evans was treated and dismissed at Grady.

Split in Ranks of American Labor Places Workers at Crossroads

More Than 3,000,000 Unionists Are Affected by Break, But Triumph of C. I. O. Over Federation Would Touch 30,000,000 Persons.

The split in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor today affects directly more than 3,000,000 men and women who hold cards in labor unions and ultimately may touch the lives of another 30,000,000 eligible for union membership. The United Press presents herewith one of a series on the present dispute and the history of the trade union movement in America.

By ARTHUR F. DEGREVE.

UNITED PRESS CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(UP)—Organized labor stands at the crossroads tonight after a turbulent 35-year trip toward a workers' Utopia on the rocky path of solidarity.

Workers are divided into two camps. Leaders of the American Federation of Labor, who can close factories with a wave of their hand, are snarling at each other. Bulky war chests of wealthy unions have been tapped to pit man against man in a fierce struggle which may change the entire course of trade unionism in America and affect the future of industry and commerce.

The issue: Whether workers shall continue to be organized by trades in the mass production industry, or whether they shall belong to one big union for each of the industries such as the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America for the building industry.

It is not a new issue. Socialists proposed such a plan in the '80s but their chief objective was to unite the workers of the country into a potent weapon for political reform. They were not concerned with the success of trade unionism as a movement. They sought only influence in the political arena.

Today they are a weak minority in the labor movement and only partially effective in the garment trades unions in the east.

Organized in 1881.

There have been many splits in organized labor since the federation was organized in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1881. But none has assumed the proportions of the one today. It is impossible to forecast the outcome of the struggle unless a peace is reached before the battle reaches the floor of the annual convention of the federation in Tampa, Fla., opening on November 16.

There are a maze of problems which make an accord difficult. Not the least of these is a dozen years when pay union leaders as much as $20,000 a year and a handsome expense account. The same jobs were handled by men in the "personal" union movement in America for less than $3,000 a year—many times, much less.

The conflict has brought together at least two of the most dynamic figures in organized labor today—President William Green, of the Federation, and John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, the most powerful individual union in the world. Green is fighting to preserve the traditional craft union policy of the federation, a policy which has enrolled in a machinists' union, a teamster in a teamsters' union, an electrician in the electrical union—and Lewis demands that, in the mass production industry, all workers belong to one big union.

Obviously success of Lewis' program would strip the individual craft unions of thousands of their members. This would result in a sharp reduction in the amount of dues paid to individual craft unions and ultimately would lead to lower salaries and reduced expense accounts for the union heads. Of the one today, Lewis and his colleagues—comprising the committee for industrial organization—would, if successful, control the American labor movement.

It is estimated that there are today approximately 30,000,000 American workers eligible to union membership. The A. F. of L. membership is less than 3,500,000. Failure of the federation to organize the remaining workers is blamed by Lewis upon its "archaic policy." He contends that organized labor must change its policies to meet changing economic conditions.

Labor, Lewis has insisted, must meet industry's scrapping of hand work and substitution of labor-saving machines with rejuvenated organization plans. He offered his industrial union, highly successful in mining. Green and the federation's executive council shouted "no." And Lewis said he would not.

Maimed Vet Wheeled to Church
To Deliver Armistice Day Address

A hero of the World War, whose broken back, suffered during the hostilities in France, makes it impossible for him to walk or even sit in an ordinary chair, was wheeled last night into the Druid Hills Baptist church to deliver a stirring Armistice Day address.

Captain Ben C. Hogue, junior vice commander of the World War Order of Veterans, was the speaker. He told his audience Armistice Day, to be observed Wednesday, belongs to every American—not merely to the former service men.

"The veterans did a good job and they are all very proud of their record of service," he said. "They consider it a privilege to have been able to serve their country in time of national emergency. However, they ask no praise and those of us who were maimed or disabled do not desire pity."

"All that we ask is that you show your appreciation of our service by your loyalty to your country, our flag and for the principles of our Democratic form of government, for which we fought and which we believe to be the best in the world."

Captain Hogue urged Atlantans to buy poppies Armistice Day to help the disabled veterans who fashioned them.

and demand wage increases, reduction of hours and improved conditions of employment.

"The (presidential) election demonstrated that the workers have power if they choose to exercise it. Let an enlarged and more powerful labor movement be now the immediate concern of every worker."

With the close of the Lewis committee's meeting, the next important development in the family fight was expected from Washington where the Ladies' Garment Workers' executive board is to meet tomorrow.

David Dubinsky, president of that powerful union, said the board would determine whether it would send delegates to the federation's annual convention starting next week in Tampa, Florida.

SCHEDULE CHANGE.

Lewis committee took no action, however, until yesterday when it proposed that peace negotiations be conducted by Lewis and Green instead of by committees.

Green, in his telegram to the Lewis committee, reminded the members of the council's action, then added: "While I lack authority to change the policy outlined by the executive council, I will gladly meet and confer with President Lewis at his convenience."

Lewis said only one member of his committee did not sanction his reply, and that this member wanted more time to consider it. He refused to name the member.

"Necessary Funds."

After a long meeting devoted to discussion of the steel situation, the committee issued a statement it had authorized increased organizing activity and had appropriated "necessary funds" for this purpose.

"The committee holds that the workers of the country have a right to participate in the increase of prosperity of the nation," the statement said. "It calls upon the workers to organize."

Why 81 Hairs Die Unborn Each Day

THE average healthy scalp sheds and grows 81 hairs each day. It is natural for hair to fall out—but it is also natural for new hair to replace that which falls. Obviously, then, baldness comes only when some unnatural condition, such as dandruff, keeps the hair-growing structure from replacing falling hair.

In order to help your scalp to grow hair naturally, you must (1) keep it clean; (2) keep it free from infection; and (3) stimulate the sources of nourishment. Thomas treatment helps you to accomplish these ends. Proper cleansing methods are provided; dandruff and other local infections are overcome; and the sources of nourishment are gently stimulated. Come in today for a FREE scalp examination and learn more about this reliable, proved scalp treatment.

WRITING DIFFICULTIES DISCLOSED BY AUTHOR

stance, after she had written that 1 chapter first, she didn't exclaim: "Well, that's that!" and begin on the first chapter. Probably, after several months of retrospection, she really could sit down and list the order in which the chapters were written. But, that's not necessary. It is sufficient to know that she understood thoroughly before she started to write just what the book was to be from beginning to end. Then, she wrote the various chapters as she felt in the mood.

Of course, she had no idea what the number of each chapter would be as she wrote it. She knew only the sequence of events, for that sequence hinged almost entirely on the sequence of historic events.

For instance, again:

That spot in the book where Scarlett leaves Atlanta and goes back home to find her mother dead, the plantation looted and Tara in a desolate shape. She pitched in to shoulder the burden of restoring it to usefulness.

Troublesome Incident.

Margaret Mitchell struggled for two years with this one vital incident. She faced the task here of portraying through dramatic narrative a definite picture of the character of Scarlett. It was necessary that a reader who accompanied Scarlett through this bleak adventure should emerge with an intimate understanding of her methods in meeting and dealing with adversity.

"This part of the story worried me," says the author. "I struggled with it in my mind. I prowled around it mentally for a long time, looking at it from all angles and not getting anywhere. I could never write a line of it and never made a try at it, on paper."

"I didn't seem able to capture the smug of the cedars; the smell of the swamp; the barnyard odors, and pack them into those chapters. I was in the Ritz hotel at Atlantic City when it all came to me. I can't explain why. The Ritz is nothing like Tara."

Came Simply, Clearly.

"I can only tell you this. I was not even thinking about the story when all this came to me very simply and very clearly. It was cold, winter when we were at Atlantic City, and yet I could see clearly how dusty and stifling a red clay road in Georgia looks and feels in September, how the leaves on the trees are dry and there isn't any wind to move them and how utterly still the deep country woods are. And there is the queerest smell in the swampy bottom lands at twilight. And I suddenly saw the very haunted scene a section would look the day after a big battle, after two armies had moved on. So, I came home and wrote it."

"I had been in Atlantic City with my husband, John Marsh, who was attending a convention. We had intended, while we were in the east, to go to New York where we were to see some shows and I was to buy some clothes. I gave that up. John agreed that if I had the atmosphere that had been eluding me for two years it would be best for me to get home as quickly as possible."

No Architectural Draft.

Neither does Margaret Mitchell pursue the ritual of other authors who sit down and chart out their stories on paper just as an architect plots the plans for a building. Some authors, it has been said, draw a line down the page and then draw lines from the edge of the paper into that middle vertical line indicating where each incident starts and works into the main body of the story. The whole design looks something like the skeleton of a human torso.

"I can't understand how anyone could write that way," she insists. "I don't write from notes. I have it all in my mind. If I am writing Chapter 26, I know all that is going before and after without having to refer to charts or maps."

On that matter of dealing with results before she concerns herself with causes, she explains that she decides first what she wants a character to do and then she decides how to have it done gracefully.

Hard Labor Created "Gone With the Wind"

tive here and there. Some excellent authorities support her in this practice; some equally excellent authorities shudder at the thought.

"I had an argument with my publishers about the number of split infinitives that their readers discovered in my manuscript," she said. "I fought them clear through to the finish on this. I tried to make my story more or less colloquial and easy to read. I determined when I first sat down to the writing of this book that I would write as a native north Georgian. I would rewrite sentences that sounded a trifle purist and try to get down to earth by rewriting and rewriting until I felt I had captured the conversation of some north Georgian in my descriptive paragraphs."

"Writing is a hard job for me. I don't have that facility for just dashing along. Night after night I have labored and labored and have wound up with no more than two pages. After reading those efforts on the morning after, I have whittled and whittled until I had no more than six lines salvaged. Then I had to start all over again."

"Those three chapters that I wrote as soon as I returned home from Atlanta City are about the only ones in the book that I did not rewrite at least 20 times. As they appear in the book, they are substantially as they were first written."

"It took me from 1926 through 1929 to write most of that book, and I did a little work on it in 1930 and possibly some in 1931. It didn't take me actually six long years as some people have said, but it was a long, hard job."

Not Merely Notes.

Neither, she insists, did she just hand her publishers a "mess of notes," as has been reported, and receive from them the order to go ahead.

"That, of course, is ridiculous," she will tell you. "No publisher buys an unwritten book from unknown authors. I turned over to them an almost fully completed manuscript."

She admits she read "thousands of books" to capture the spirit of the historical and human facts she has recorded.

"I have never worked out my bibliography, but I intend to do that if I get the time," she says. "I read histories of all sorts, northern and southern."

Task of Condensation.

Condensation was her most difficult job.

"Often, I would take several chapters and condense them down into one chapter, just to make the story move more swiftly."

Checking history was another serious job.

"After I had sold the book, I knew I would have hundreds of well-informed persons ready to leap at my inaccuracies. As a matter of fact, I had done no actual studying for the writing of the book. Of course, in years past, I had read a lot of history and, of course, I had listened to lots of stories told by the old folks who had lived through this period. But, when I was reading history or listening to stories, I never thought I would use them in a book. When I sat down to write the book, I wrote out memories of long ago. I never thought I'd sell the book, so I didn't see any reason why I should bother with looking up the incidents in history books. After I really had sold the book, I realized I'd have to check every detail and I did. It took about eight months and the job was awful."

And this should give her readers some idea of the hard labor that has brought her sudden fame.

"Just think," some persons will say. "One book and she's made overnight."

Try it yourself.

Tomorrow's installment of this series will deal with Margaret Mitchell's life and how she wants to live.

CORNELIUS P. MURPHY PASSES AT RESIDENCE

Cornelius P. Murphy, 84, retired, died yesterday at the residence, 1126 Oxford road, N. E. Funeral services will be held Tuesday at Sacred Heart church, the time to be announced by Brandon-Bond-Condor, who are in charge.

Mr. Murphy came to Atlanta in 1888 and founded the C. P. Murphy Roofing Company.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. John B. McCallum; one son, E. D. Murphy; one sister, Mrs. Delia Donovan, of Philadelphia; three grandsons, E. D. Murphy Jr., Thomas B. and William J. Murphy and a granddaughter, Miss Josephine Murphy.

We got shoes, you got shoes. But Jack Estes, of a Terrace drive address, and Stafford Stock, 915 East Pace's Ferry road, haven't got shoes.

Their shoes were stolen as they sat in front of Grady hospital last night awaiting the return of friends who were visiting inside.

They reported to police two men approached the car and, while holding a razor at Estes' throat, demanded that they hand over their shoes. Their cash was unharmed.

Apparently satisfied with their "loot," the two men fled into the night.

EMORY INVITES 15,000 TO CENTENNIAL FETE

Alumni in All Parts of World To Get Bids to Ceremonies

Fifteen thousand invitations to the Emory University centennial celebration were in the mail today, addressed to Emory alumni in all parts of the world and to civic and professional leaders in the southeast.

The first batch of the huge stack of invitations was sent out under the personal supervision of President Harvey W. Cox, of Emory. The invitations were tossed into a mail pouch were addressed to alumni in China, Canada, Cuba and European countries.

Other invitations will go to members of the Georgia Bar Association, the Georgia Medical Society and to members of the faculties of all colleges in the southeast.

The 15,000 invitations sent this week are supplementary to the 750 special invitations sent several weeks ago to universities and leading educational institutions of the world asking them to send representatives to the academic ceremonies that will be part of the centennial celebration on December 4 and 5.

The centennial celebration at Emory will begin December 4 and will continue through December 13. Each day on the program is devoted to one of the major professions for which Emory trains students. Leaders in each of the major professions will make addresses on the campus on these days.

ALLEN IS 'THROUGH' WITH NEW OFFICES

Says Henceforth He Will Seek Only Jobs "Already in Existence."

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 8.—(P)—De Lacey Allen said today he might "possibly" run for office in the future, but vowed it would be for one "already in existence."

Allen, a Democrat, polled some 230,000 votes for lieutenant governor of Georgia in the general election, overwhelmingly defeating his Prohibition party opponent.

At the same time, however, the voters downed a Talmadge-sponsored state constitutional amendment which would have created the office.

"Naturally I was disappointed over the failure of the amendment to carry the people of my state," Allen said in a statement.

"I am deeply grateful to the people of the state for having elected me as lieutenant governor, although I shall not have the opportunity of holding this office."

The statement was Allen's first public pronouncement since the election. He is visiting his brother, Judge Wayne Allen, of the court of crimes, here.

INSURED MORTGAGES RUN HIGH IN GEORGIA

More than half the mortgages in the state now being insured by the Federal Housing Administration, a report released yesterday from financial institutions by Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, showed.

Of the total of $804,088 in Georgia mortgages, $549,088 is being used for new construction, representing a percentage of 68.29.

The District of Columbia heads the list, with new construction mortgages representing 91.74 per cent of the business, while Georgia's neighbor, Florida, is second in the nation, with a percentage of 90.20.

Roosevelt's Second Inauguration To Be One of Greatest in History

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(UP)—A nation which gave Franklin Delano Roosevelt the staunchest vote of confidence ever tendered an American president tonight prepared to make his second inauguration one of the greatest celebrations of its kind in history.

Under the Norris "Lame-duck" legislation, the inauguration will be held on January 20 this year instead of on March 4 as in the past, and newly elected senators and congressmen will take their seats on January 5. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will send his message on the state of the nation and budget estimates to congress in its early days, as usual, or wait until after his inauguration, has not yet been announced.

Although the inaugural ceremony still is 73 days away and the official committee to take charge of arrangements has not yet been named, preliminary arrangements already are being made to take care of more than 100,000 visitors expected to be attracted to the nation's capital.

A flood of letters and telegrams from persons throughout the country seeking reservations has struck the city's leading hotels. A total of 3,000 rooms in the 34 hotels associated in the Washington Hotel Owners' Association will be available to out-of-town visitors. In addition, it was stated, there will be approximately 6,000 rooms in boarding houses and private homes to accommodate those who desire to remain in the capital.

A housing shortage has been a reality here for three years and authorities said it was planned to take care of overflow crowds in suburban towns and nearby Virginia and Maryland cities.

Washington hotel prices range from $2 to $7 for single rooms and from $7 to $15 for double rooms. William Koehendoerfer, secretary of the Hotel Owners' Association, said tonight that these rates would not be increased during the inaugural period. Reservations, it was said, will not be appointed by the official inaugural committee.

The inaugural committee will be confronted this year with a hurdle it has not faced in previous years—the vagaries of Washington weather. The capital gets its heaviest snows in mid-January and the elements may curdle the parades and other demonstrations and limit the celebration to an indoor affair. These plans are to be worked out later.

Capital matrons are gearing for a party whirl similar to pre-dead-end days.

MRS. SARAH W. CONNOR, CHURCH LEADER, DIES

Mrs. Sarah Wood Connor, president of the Ladies Aid Society of the Wesley Chapel Methodist church, died Saturday night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Haigler, on Candler road.

A former resident of Waycross, she was for 20 years an active member of the Trinity church there. She had been a resident of Atlanta for 12 years.

Other survivors include two sisters, Mrs. Anna Hart, Mt. Leansboro, Ill.; and Mrs. J. H. Mischler, Farmington, Ind.; a brother, William Wood; a nephew, F. R. Wood, Atlanta, and a granddaughter, Laura E. Haigler.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Wesley chapel with the Revs. Frank Crowley and B. C. Kerr officiating.

Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery with Awtry & Lowndes in charge.

Kidneys must clean acids from your blood

Dr. W. R. GEORGE
Former Health Commissioner of Indianapolis

And May Cause Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, and a Run-Down Condition When Kidneys Function Poorly

Your health, vitality and energy are extremely dependent upon the proper functioning of your kidneys. This is easy to understand when you know that each kidney, although only the size of your clenched fist, contains 4 million tiny, delicate tubes or filters. Your blood circulates through these tiny filters 200 times an hour, night and day. Nature provides this method of removing acids, poisons and toxins from your blood.

Causes Many Ills

Dr. Walter R. George, many years Health Commissioner of Indianapolis, recently stated: "Most people do not realize this, but the kidneys probably are the most neglected organs in the entire human anatomy. Their work is just as important and just as vital to good health as the work of the heart. The Health Commissioner of the City of Indianapolis for many years and as a medical director for a large insurance company, I have had opportunity to observe that a surprisingly high percentage of people are derelict, nervous, tired, and worn-out because of poorly functioning kidneys."

If your kidneys slow down and do not function properly and fail to remove approximately 3 pints of acids, poisons, and liquids from your blood every 24 hours, then there is a gradual accumulation of these acids and wastes, and slowly, but surely, your system becomes poisoned, making you feel old before your time, run-down and worn out.

Many other troublesome and painful symptoms may be caused by poorly functioning kidneys, such as Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Dizziness, Frequent Headaches, Rheumatism, Pain, Swollen Joints, Circles Under Eyes, Backaches, Loss of Vitality, Burning, Itching, Smarting and Acidity.

Help Kidneys Doctors' Way

Druggists and doctors in over thirty-five countries throughout the world think that the proper way to help kidney functions is with the modern, up-to-date Doctor's prescription, Cystex, because it is scientifically prepared in strict accordance with the United States and British Pharmacopoeia to act directly on the kidneys as a diuretic. For instance, Dr. T. J. Hastell, famous surgeon and scientist of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any doctor will recommend it for its definite benefit in the treatment of many functional kidney and bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless."

And Dr. T. A. Ellis, of Toronto, Canada, has stated: "Cystex's influence in aiding the treatment of sluggish kidney and bladder functions can not be over-estimated." And Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, of San Francisco, said: "I can truthfully recommend the use of Cystex," while Dr. N. G. Giannini, widely known Italian physician, stated: "I have found that Cystex is a most effective remedy for kidney and bladder disorders. A feeling of many years' lifted off one's back often follows the fine effects of Cystex."

Guaranteed 8-Day Test

If you suffer from any of the conditions mentioned in this article or feel run-down, worn out, and old before your time, poorly functioning kidneys may be the real cause of your trouble. And because Cystex has given successful results in thousands of cases throughout the world after other remedies have failed, you should try Doctor's prescription to the test immediately, with the understanding that it must prove satisfactory in every way within 8 days, or you merely return the empty package and the full purchase price is refunded.

Because Cystex is especially and scientifically prepared to act directly on the kidneys as a diuretic, it is quick and positive in action. Within 48 hours most people report a remarkable improvement and complete satisfaction. Within 8 days, Cystex costs only three cents a dose at druggists. Put it to the test today. Under the guarantee you must feel stronger, stronger, and better than you have in a long time—you must feel that Cystex has done the work thoroughly and completely, or you merely return the empty package and it costs nothing. You are the sole judge of your own satisfaction. You don't afford to take chances with cheap, inferior, or irritating drugs or any medicine that is not good enough to be guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for guaranteed Cystex pronounced (Siss-tex) today.

S. G. LINDERBECK, 52, RAIL AGENT, PASSES

Floridan, Seaboard Veteran, Dies After Operation in Hospital Here.

Samuel G. Linderbeck, 52, a general agent in the passenger department of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, died at a private hospital here yesterday following an operation.

Linderbeck, whose headquarters of office was at Miami, Fla., had been employed by the Seaboard 32 years. He spent most of his life in Jacksonville.

The body will be sent tonight to Jacksonville aboard a Southern railway train at 8:30 p. m., for burial.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow from the chapel of a Jacksonville funeral home.

Survivors include his widow; a son, Raymond G. Linderbeck, of Tallahassee, and his mother, Mrs. David Linderbeck, of New York and Miami.

Linderbeck was a native of New York. He came to Florida in 1914. He first lived at Tampa, representing the Seaboard Air Line there, and was transferred to Jacksonville in 1917. He lived at Jacksonville until 1935, when he was transferred to Miami. He was an active Mason and Kiwanian.

ROOSEVELT LANDSLIDE SEEN AS BLOW TO REDS

Maine? And what is a Democrat, and can there be a "solid south" if every body else insists on being solid too? These are questions for the politicians and the organizers.

But for the social philosopher (you and me), interest centers in the significance of the election for social policy all the world over. The New Deal becomes a new start. It doesn't matter whether this or that part of the New Deal was working successfully, whether a lot of it was impractical, and half of it unconstitutional. It means that the great mass of the people feel that social salvation is to be found in that direction.

The world breaks with individualism that was, or rather it goes past it as a milestone, and staggers on. No matter how rough the track, how hard the climb, how dense the wood, the light is in that direction, like daylight seen through the trees at dawn. And equally the world—the vast mass of the plain people (you and me again)—we are social philosophers one minute and plain people the next; we're as smart as that—refuses to make the side turn toward Communism, Socialism.

The individual wants to be regulated but not absorbed. He will live henceforth in an intricate frame of rules and regulations, but he'll live in his own house. No "comrade" stuff for him, and no nationalization of other people's children. He'll keep his own. He'll stand for collective bargaining, but not collective bossing. And if you try to shove him too hard with social pressure, he'll "go duck hunting" like Governor London.

Know Where We're Going.

No now we know where we are going. That, I take it, is the reason for the sudden leap in the market. Like a liberated horse wanting to be off. All the world wanted certainty, wanted to know where we "were at," and which way we were going. Now we know it, and we'll be off at a pace that will startle humanity.

Psychologists have been telling us for sometime that we all take our ideas from one another, that we think collectively, that we move in a mass. It is a low doctrine, far below the idea of the supreme individual free will, but there is something in it. And a great thought wave is going out over America to flood high tides upon the coast of Europe.

The general idea of the New Deal has been that of a regulated society—not a new game but a new set of rules. As it grew in volume, it grew in complexity. Its errors were more apparent than its successes. Its finance was staggering. Its responsibilities overwhelming. Was it salvation or was it chaos? The way out, or the way over the cliff?

A year ago, it looked as if the sheer complexity of it and the cost of it, and the lack of immediate visible success frightened people. It began to feel like walking in the dark. It seemed as if a popular vote would have swept it away in a flood, leaving only chips floating in the foam. Lots of people thought that—I, for one, thought it and said it. That's all I knew. I'm always wrong.

Inspires Confidence.

This social reconstruction by regenerative legislation, starting from the idea of welfare in place of isolated rights, is a vast task. But the definite and certain knowledge that it is to go forward inspires immediate confidence, and confidence is half-way to success.

All kinds of things will get in the way: Constitutional limitations first. Where does federal power end, and state power begin? And where do they both stop? If that question can't be settled, it will prove a ball and chain on the feet of progress. What was once the sheltering arm of a charter of liberty will become the strangling hug of an endless lawsuit. But it's hard to settle. Behind it are all sorts of memories and traditions, and voices of the past and tattered flags still waving. A state is still a state. How can it be settled? I don't know, and if I did, I'd be wrong. For us in Canada, there is no doubt of the effect of the election. We were all ready to step out toward a new prosperity. Now we can step with both feet. It is not merely the particular outlook for reciprocal trade—that's a smaller matter beside the main issue—not merely the prospect of vast development of works that affect our top half of the continent, it is the new outlook for a wide social movement that won't mean Communism, that won't bring revolution, and that carries business prosperity as a byproduct.

... With Both Feet.

So we start, I say, with both feet. If we fall down, that's nothing. We can get up again. That's the way the New Deal is supposed to work. And if Vermont and Maine feel lonely where they are, they can slide over backwards and fall in with us. We always wanted them anyway.

That, then, is that. The New Deal election is the biggest crack that Communism ever got; the biggest endorsement that Democracy ever received; the biggest burst of economic sunshine since the war—a light that will reach across the ocean.

So now I must hurry down to be there when the stock exchange opens and buy common stocks and base metals, and a few gold mines. And if I am wrong and they collapse, then I'll go "duck hunting."

LOST FREIGHTER IN TOW.

SEATTLE, Nov. 8.—(AP)—J. T. Cornell, Pacific coast manager for the Shepard line, said today the company's freighter Timber Rush, reported missing 2,550 miles northwest of San Salvador, is being towed back to the Panama Canal by a tug sent to her assistance from Balboa, C. Z.

ROOSEVELT MAY ASK DOLLAR CONTROL ANEW

President's Authority Expires January 30 Unless Congress Acts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(UP)—President Roosevelt will ask the next congress to continue his broad powers over the dollar, it was learned tonight from administration fiscal authorities.

The President and his advisers, it was said, believe flexible executive powers to meet monetary emergencies are essential to protect this nation's exchange "poker game."

The presidential authority expiring January 30, which congress will be asked to extend, empowers him to:

1. Declare the dollar's value in relation to gold, which now is worth 35 and a fraction percent of the pre-depression dollar, by another nine points or 16 per cent of its present value.
2. Maintain a $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund for secret use in international exchange operations to stabilize the dollar's value abroad.

Treasury officials indicated there was no immediate prospect of any change in the dollar's value. The president's authority to act quickly if necessary would keep this country in an advantageous position in event of any possible collapse of recent attempts to restore stability to the world currency system.

Freedom in operations of the stabilization fund is essential for fulfillment of the recent tri-power monetary agreement.

part-time employment has been reduced and that further growth in output will result in a larger increase in the number employed.

Dividend on Rise.

"The fact that expansion is now proceeding in industries where unemployment has been greatest also contributes to this end."

Dividend payments have shown a steady increase this year, with larger disbursements coming more from industrial corporations than from railroads and public utilities, the board reported.

In a special bank study, the review reported that there is a close relationship between the proportion of a bank's deposits in large accounts and its liquidity.

Banks having high percentages of deposits of more than $100,000, it was said, were found to have high proportions of liquid assets to total deposits.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in its "Washington Review" said that "the momentum which has been gained in business activities is impressive, both in its extent and in its promise for the period ahead."

The review said that the last 17 months had not been a "period of spectacular bursts here and there," but that processes had been at work to bring "all activities nearer the average instead of some being far above and others equally far below."

"It is necessary to go back a decade to find another period in which business momentum had within itself equal elements of strength," the report declared.

a foreign combat. The present law provides for an embargo only when a state of war is proclaimed by the president.

Such a proposal was expected to meet opposition, since it would sharply curtail the President's discretion.

Bill on War Profits.

A bill to halt profiteering in wartime, which died in the closing days of the last session, was expected to be reintroduced with few changes. It would impose a 99 per cent tax on net personal incomes over $10,000 and on corporation incomes of more than 6 per cent earned while the nation is at war.

The original measure, as reported by the senate military affairs committee, also provided for rigid regulation of prices, wages, and investments, and set up an industrial management corps to supervise wartime production.

Any attempt to avoid the 99 per cent war tax would be punishable by court martial.

A five-man commodity control commission would be empowered to fix prices, control exchanges, purchase goods for the government, and compensate owners for factories turned to war uses.

The military affairs committee noted in its report that the chief object of the 99 per cent tax was to put warfare on a "pay as you go" basis.

SEEKS SOLON'S LIBERTY.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Jesse C. Duke, Washington attorney, said tonight he would contend at a habeas corpus hearing tomorrow that Representative John W. Hoepfel, of California, and his son, Charles J. Hoepfel, had been arrested illegally as well as convicted illegally of conspiring to sell a United States Military Academy appointment.

REDS RETAIN MADRID AFTER TERRIFIC FIGHT

bombs fell on the city during the day.

Railway Bombed. Several bombs fell on the platform of the north railway station, killing one and wounding two. Another fell in Espana square but it failed to explode.

Another fell near the French embassy in Recoletas street and citizens began moving to the northern part of the city as the bombardment increased in intensity.

Screams of the dying and wounded could be heard above the confusion.

The Fascist bombers were escorted by pursuit planes. They flew low over the whole southwestern rim of the city to drop their cargoes of death among thousands of workers throwing up fortifications for defense against Fascist infantry attack.

With almost 35,000 well-armed men operating in the war zone at the southern outskirts of the capital, the new defense council which supplanted the government of Premier Francisco Largo Caballero expressed confidence the Fascist advance was checked from that direction.

Barbers to Front.

Virtually every man able to handle a weapon was engaged in defense of the city today. A battalion of barbers was sent to the front this morning and a radio call later in the day summoned doorkeepers of all ministries and other public buildings.

The food shortage was beginning to be felt more and more as the siege continued although there were still quantities of rice and lentils.

The American embassy reopened as a refuge and reported 34 of 181 United States citizens in Madrid were within its walls. Many others sent their luggage, ready for a hasty entrance should the situation become more acute.

General Jose Miaja, commander of Madrid since the Socialist cabinet fled to Valencia, declared his confidence in the proletariat's ability to repel the invasion.

"We have plenty of men and arms," he said. "The destiny of Madrid now rests in the hands of its people."

FASCISTS ENCAMP FOR ATTACK TODAY

WITH THE SPANISH FASCIST TROOPS OUTSIDE MADRID, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Spanish Fascist troops, after gaining a few yards on the south side of Madrid, encamped tonight at the bridge-heads on the banks of the Manzanares river for a renewed attack at dawn tomorrow in which their commanders hoped they would be able to sweep into the capital.

Today General Francisco Franco's army blasted a hole in Madrid's first-line trenches which the Socialist militia defended with withering machine gun fire.

Resistance of the militia never wavered until insurgent shells found the trenches in which they fought.

Then the occupants ran up the white flag and hundreds of prisoners were taken. Other militiamen ran from the first line, presumably to fall back into the rear.

Defenders of Madrid, the Fascist headquarters said, poured hot oil from roof tops on the heads of the invading troops.

Women sniped from balconies at the Fascists, it was reported, after the insurgents advanced from the west bank of the Manzanares river over the Princess and Segovia bridges leading to the capital.

As the battle progressed, the insurgent batteries stepped up the speed of their firing from one shot every 15 seconds to one every 10 seconds.

Shells from Madrid batteries whistled overhead as eight insurgent fighting planes circled over the advancing units.

No government planes were to be seen during or after the attack of seven Fascist war planes which dropped 18 bombs on the capital.

Hardly had the screaming wounded been carried to hospitals when insurgent land batteries hurled explosive shells into the heart of Madrid's business section.

Unofficial estimates placed the dead at 200 in the four-minute bombardment by the Fascist planes which dived and carried out their deadly mission through bursts of anti-aircraft bombs.

Blum Regime Ready TO SEND ARMS TO REDS

a speech by Defense Minister Edouard Daladier to a Radical Socialist gathering at Labrit.

"France extends the hand of friendship to the Spanish people," he said, "and will do all in its power to help them to win the day."

Machine gunners struck their heads—padded like football players with helmets—through openings in the top of the tanks.

An occasional shell from Madrid whined overhead, some bursting within a few hundred yards of the attackers.

Many of the Madrid shells were "duds" which did not explode. Advance units of the Fascists sent back word that government tanks were opposing them in efforts to break their lines from the east.

Overhead eight insurgent fighting planes circled and dived although watchers on the ground were not able to sight a single government plane.

Fascist headquarters at Talavera in announcing entrance of their troops into Madrid posted proclamations that way to the crest of the Manzanares ravine.

Another column strung single-file across a cabbage patch to attack from the east.

Swift baby tanks backed up the in-ship to all peoples," he said. "It is hard luck for those who refuse it."

"With England and the United States, France knows how to defend democracy. France will not go to any conferences as a beggar."

Answering criticisms by the Communist leader, Maurice Thorez, who has assailed the government's handling of its social reform program, Blum asserted:

"A democratic government has done in five months what dictatorships proved powerless to do."

"For the government to accomplish a full program of reform it takes four years."

Blum condemned "capitalists" who, he said, sought to block the social reforms—social security and labor legislation.

He reaffirmed the government's allegiance to the Franco-Soviet pact, a mutual pledge by the two countries to aid each other in the event of attack by a European power.

Comment was withheld until spokesmen have time to study the text of Blum's speech carefully.

In Whitehall it was said officials had no intimation that Blum would make such a speech, and it was recalled that France only last week supported Britain in efforts to smooth out the non-intervention tangle.

The subcommittee of the non-intervention group is scheduled to meet Monday afternoon to draft proposals for making the agreement more effective.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH SPAIN WITHHELD

Russia, Germany and Italy, Only Nations Favoring Recognition.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—(UP)—The governments of Europe—with the exception of Russia, Germany and Italy—have agreed to avoid, provisionally at least, direct diplomatic contact with either the new Loyalist regime in Valencia or the Rebel junta, it was learned tonight.

The decision resulted from a general consultation among European chancelleries following the flight of Premier Francisco Largo Caballero's government from Madrid to Valencia. Moscow's recognition of the Caballero government or its successor has already been given. Rome and Berlin await only Franco's signal of the definite capture of Madrid to recognize his government.

But all other European capitals, under the leadership of Paris and London, appear decided to maintain contact with the two opposing forces by means of consuls. In other words, they plan to keep in touch with them on business matters without according diplomatic recognition.

European foreign offices also are apparently agreed not to recognize for the time being any independent Catalan government, patterned along Soviet lines, which may be established in Barcelona.

DETECTIVE SUSPENDED AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT

Detective Y. F. Gheslin was ordered suspended by Police Chief T. O. Sturdivant yesterday pending hearing before the public safety committee at its next meeting, as a result of an automobile accident early yesterday morning.

Gheslin's car allegedly sideswiped a parked truck on Edgewood avenue, slightly damaging both vehicles. He was charged with reckless driving and driving an automobile while drunk. These charges will come up in traffic court tomorrow morning.

JUDGE J. R. HUTCHESON AND MRS. BANDY MARRY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Johnnie Bandy, of Memphis, and Judge J. R. Hutcheson, of Douglasville, Ga., were united in marriage this afternoon at the former's home.

Following a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., the couple will go to Douglasville, where Judge Hutcheson is the superior judge of the Tallapoosa circuit and president of the First National Bank.

Mrs. Hutcheson was associated with State Teachers' College here for a number of years.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, the Famous Polar Explorer.
After a Meal of Bare, Rugged Arctic Fare
...He Seeks the Comfort and Cheer of Camels!

He is one of the world's most famous explorers. He knows the Arctic and the Antarctic. He has crawled for 18 hours over treacherous, new-formed ice and fought his way step by step through howling blizzards. He has lived on pemmican and biscuit. "Where I've gone, Camels have gone," says Sir Hubert. "An explorer needs good digestion," he continues. "In the Arctic, I take what I can get to eat and like it. Smoking Camels adds gusto to my meals and brings me a great feeling of well-being afterward. Camels set me right! A Camel has often given me the 'lift' I needed to carry on."

"MOST OF THE GIRLS HERE at college smoke Camels," says Miss Josephine O'Neill. "Mental work often affects digestion. Smoking Camels helps my digestion and makes food taste better. Camels always taste mild and cool."

HE POURS WHITE-HOT MOLTEN STEEL. C. V. Davis' job is plenty tough on digestion. He says: "Smoking Camels makes food taste better and set better with me. Camels seem to be just what I need to keep my digestion in good working order. And they're mild!"

PEMMICAN and dry biscuit for Sir Hubert Wilkins... perhaps a thick, juicy steak with all the trimmings for you.

It's not alone what you eat that's important. How you digest it counts for a lot too. And, day by day, explorers, famous athletes, and interesting men and women in every level of life add experiences from their active lives, showing that smoking Camels encourages good digestion and a sense of well-being. Camels at mealtime help in two special ways. They ease tension and stimulate the flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—so necessary to normal, healthy digestion.

Capitol's 'Hot Money'*Swift and Entertaining

Entertainment which should strike a responsive note with all audiences is on view this week at the Capitol theater, where "Hot Money," feature film, and an excellent stage show were presented for the first time yesterday.

The film, starring Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts and Joseph Cawthorne, is a swiftly-paced, entertaining story, filled with amusing situations and containing many laugh-getting lines.

Alexander and Miss Roberts are excellent; Paul Graetz and Cawthorne, as well as the others of the splendid supporting cast, do unusually well by their respective parts.

Briefly, the story tells of adventures in high finance which begin when Alexander and Cawthorne attempt to promote stock in "Gasoline Substitute, Inc.," the formula of an inventor, which turns water into gasoline.

The picture pursues an obstacle-beset path of romance for Alexander and Miss Roberts, which ends happily, of course.

On the stage, a varied vaudeville show furnishes entertainment of high order. The feature acts include Ariel, a European sensation; Delmar, baron of balance; Malcom, who does amazing card tricks; the Three Maxwell Sisters, novelty dancers; and Chiquita, Spanish dancer. A stage band and Enrico Leide and his Capitolians furnish music. Short subjects round out the bill.

ALL-TIME RECORD SET BY MONTGOMERY WARD

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Montgomery Ward & Company's sales volume continued during October to shatter all records in the mail order and retail sales concern's history, said a monthly statement issued today.

October gross sales volume totaled $45,455,404, the largest figure of any single month in Ward's history. This was an increase of 26 per cent compared with October last year.

For the first nine months of the fiscal year to October 31, gross sales totaled $265,598,051, the largest for any corresponding period of Ward's records. This was an increase of 22 per cent compared with the corresponding period last year.

October sales showed a gain of more than $12,000,000 over the September volume. Last year October sales gained more than $10,000,000 over the previous month.

Three Cash Awards Announced In Constitution's 'Tarzan' Contest

"Some like 'em hot; Some like 'em cold."

In reading the hundreds of letters submitted by followers of the adventures of the mighty man of the jungle, published daily and Sunday in The Constitution, the "Tarzan" contest editor was reminded of the lines quoted above.

That's just the way the expressions ran. While a large number admit preference for either the daily or the Sunday, many others feel that either, without the other, would be incomplete. One contestant expressed his feeling by saying "The Sunday page, to me, is dessert to the daily strips, but then some people like nothing but dessert."

After much juggling of opinions amongst the judges, the winners of the $15, $7.50 and $2.50 cash awards in The Constitution-Loew's Grand contest were decided upon in the following order: Miss Martha Reese Sanders, 1810 Rhodes-Haverly building; Martin W. Elliott, 220 Poplar circle, and Charles S. Bell, 443 Ponce de Leon avenue.

Checks await these three at the cashier's office of The Constitution. The contest editor has escaped!

Agrarian Representatives Demand Strong U. S. Production Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—A demand for a strong federal production program along the lines of the invalidated AAA was presented to the administration yesterday by a group of farm representatives called together primarily to discuss crop insurance.

The administration proposal for crop insurance was mentioned only incidentally in a resolution adopted by 100 farm spokesmen asking direct control of crop production and maintenance of "parity" prices.

The farm group's resolution urged a "permanent program of surplus storage and commodity loans with voluntary crop insurance in cases where a practical program can be devised."

But the resolution asserted a storage and insurance program would be futile "unless coupled with some effective means of controlling production and distribution of farm products."

Secretary Wallace, after an interview with the President, told White House reporters the farmers attending the meeting apparently wanted to revive the original Agricultural Adjustment Administration which was voided by the supreme court.

This sentiment was openly expressed at the discussion between members of President Roosevelt's crop insurance committee and the farmer spokesmen they had invited here to climax a three-day discussion of the proposed insurance plan.

Significant Action. It was the first indication of a move to revive the old AAA in the face of the supreme court's ruling that it was unconstitutional. Coming on the heels of the Roosevelt triumph at the polls, the incident was regarded with great significance.

Edward A. O'Neal, who, as president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, is head of the largest farm organization, said he wanted re-enactment of the old "Triple A" together with features of the present soil conservation plan and loans to farmers on commodities.

"After 16 years of legislative attempts to help the farmer there was one thing that worked, and that was the AAA," said O'Neal. "Of course somebody threw a monkey wrench into it but I guess the people of this country are still running it."

Want Stability.

C. V. Gregory, of Chicago, editor of a farm journal, said he doubted if

KRESS SERVICE

an idea that has become an ideal!

MERCHANDISING cannot be confined to the mere buying and selling of goods. Human needs demand that it be broader in scope... that it be in touch with the community life... that it be fused with SERVICE.

These things were not set down in tangible form when our organization began. But these ideas have been a part of every Kress transaction... with customers, with manufacturers, with employees... until, through years of mutual fair dealing, they have grown to the iron strength of tradition. Today, the service which we render is the source of our growth and the bulwark of our future.

SERVICE, AS WE SEE IT, MEANS:

- Offering merchandise which, as a whole, affords better value!
- Making sales with the understanding that they must be satisfactory or an exchange or refund will be made!
- Creating a more pleasant shopping atmosphere!
- Maintaining stores which reflect the growth and prosperity of the community!

To the people of Atlanta and to the policy of selling "Quality Merchandise—Rightly Priced," this building is dedicated... in the belief that it is a tribute to the progressiveness of the community and that it will afford us broader opportunities for service.

Today, S. H. Kress and Company's new store opens on Broad Street, across from Rich's. This new store takes its design from the Kress institution on Fifth Avenue in New York . . . perfection in retail store architecture . . . the last word in efficiency and comfort. Like Rich's . . . it too is completely air-conditioned.

34 years ago Kress had faith in Atlanta and its development . . . its first store having been located at 43 Whitehall in 1902. This organization is considered the most astute of all retailers in the selection of strategic locations . . . wise in the way of knowing and sensing the heart of a city's traffic.

So, today, these post-graduates wise in the knowing the "hub of a city" . . . bring its Fifth Avenue replica to Broad Street in Atlanta. Rich's compliments Kress' on its unerring good judgment and is mighty glad to say . . . Welcome Neighbor!

Auburn Concealed Real Chance Against L. S. U. Saturday

We looked down that day from the rim of the Rose Bowl—January 1, 1935. Ninety thousand people roaring. Making the huge bowl a literal cauldron of boiling sound. Alabama had fought back and exploded a pass attack which had staggered the Stanford team. Dixie Howell and Don Hutson were the combination.

Howell came out. Joe Riley went in. The crowd relaxed. The big show was over, for the time being.

Almost immediately the crowd was up again—shouting, pounding backs, screaming in semi-hysteria. Joe Riley, the substitute, had heaved a pass which the fleet Don Hutson caught for another touchdown.

After the game everyone said: "No need for Alabama to worry about Dixie Howell's graduation. That boy Joe Riley can fill his shoes."

Last year he didn't. They said of him, unfairly, he was a disappointment. The Alabama team of 1935 wobbled, as do most teams the year after the Rose Bowl game. It never got going. And Joe Riley was just one of many that never got going.

This year Joe Riley is one of the great backs of the year. No boy ever made a finer comeback than this one who was tossed up to the peak in the Rose Bowl. No finer example of the comeback has been seen in years than this one by Frank Thomas' halfback. He led the attack that smothered Tulane Saturday.

With him has come the Alabama team. It is today one of the great teams of the south. It ranks along with L. S. U. on a basis of complete equality.

It was tied by Tennessee, was this Alabama team. And Frank Thomas faints yet as he recalls a whistle that blew to end the first half of the Alabama-Tennessee game. Alabama had the ball at the one-foot line and first down. As the team lined up for the first play of the series—the whistle blew. The half was over.

If anyone had, at that moment, proposed to Frank Thomas he join in a move to change the rules so that the ball, at the beginning of the second half, be placed in the same spot and in the same status as to downs as at the end of the first half, he would have voted a tremendous "Aye."

HAVANA? OR PASADENA?

As announced here about 10 days ago, Alabama has been tendered the invitation to play in the Cuban Sports Festival game at Havana on January 1.

Carlos Henreguez, the delightful gentleman appointed by the Cuban government as commissioner, was in Atlanta Friday. Talking with him then and again yesterday, he declared he wanted Alabama as one team. The other team may be a surprise. The Cuban government is trying to obtain a team which would be a great attraction along with the Crimson from Tusculoo.

But Alabama may get the Rose Bowl bid. Fordham has a tremendous lot of eastern publicity behind it. But so, I recall, did Alf Landon.

Alabama would outdraw any other team the Rose Bowl committee could select. And they know that. If Alabama goes through undefeated the team would merit the bid.

Once Cuba gets its sports festival settled and on a permanent basis, it will rival the Rose Bowl. A game down there would be a very definite attraction. Meanwhile the Rose Bowl is the first attraction.

But Frank Thomas is waving down any Rose Bowl talk. Georgia Tech is ahead for Saturday. And Tech, an erratic team to date, is awfully good when the team is going. And Vanderbilt, even more erratic, is still ahead.

"Let's have no Rose Bowl talk," says Frank Thomas. "I'd rather not hear any more about it."

But Havana—if not the Rose Bowl—is rather sure.

"THIS ONE FOR YOU."

When any football coach is under fire from the yelping alumni, it does the coach no good to come to his defense in the newspapers. The critics seem to become all the more infuriated.

But I am wondering about that little scene in Jacksonville Saturday when the Georgia players, filing out for the game, each paused and shook Harry Mehre's hand and said:

"We are going to win this one for you. We know what they are saying. And what's happened has been our fault. Not yours. We'll get this one for you."

And they did. Any comment on that little scene would be entirely superfluous. But I might add it seems to me to be a complete answer to any query that might have been raised in the past.

And the only ones who really have the complete right to answer the queries were the boys who gave it—completely.

COINCIDENT—BY OFFICIALS.

In the Georgia game Saturday at Jacksonville, this occurred, according to reports from the game:

Florida punted. Georgia's safety man, Glenn Johnson, let the ball roll. A Florida man touched it. A clipping penalty was called on Georgia.

Since it is a technical foul for the kicking team to "dead" the ball (an unsound rule, but in the books), one foul was supposed to offset another.

But officials gave the ball to Florida at the point of the foul. It was a gain for Florida of 55 yards and Florida's one touchdown resulted.

After the game officials sadly admitted they had booted the decision. It might have cost Georgia the game. As it was it did not.

In the Tech game in Atlanta, Auburn kicked. An Auburn man "dead" the ball. A clipping penalty was called on Tech. After a furious argument, right prevailed. They started back with the ball. And the head linesman had lost his point and when the ball was put down Auburn had gained 11 yards.

Officials admitted they had booted it. It was quite a coincident the same play came up in both games. And was booted in both.

TECH'S DEFEAT.

This Auburn football team must be better even, than we thought.

It won from Tech while being badly outplayed. It grabbed one "break" by the throat and choked a touchdown out of it. The other touchdown came on skill and rather uncertain tackling efforts by Tech. Billy Hitchcock should have been "had" but he had too much magic in his legs. That run was not a break, so called. It was football.

But presented with the figures, which showed Tech made 18 first downs to two; gained 285 yards to 100, completed 10 passes of 23 against one out of three; and never permitted the opposing team past the middle of the field but once and that no farther than the 41-yard line, the average person would never guess the opposing team as the winner.

Yet it was. When a team can be that badly outplayed and still win the football game, it must be quite a team.

PETRELS OPEN DRILLS TODAY FOR CHOCTAWS

Oglethorpe in Shape for Mississippi College at Clinton Saturday.

Oglethorpe's Stormy Petrels begin today preparing for her game with Mississippi College next Saturday at Clinton, Miss.

For the first time this season the Petrels went through a game without a single injury. With virtually a week's rest before the Mississippi game the team should be in the best condition of the year.

The Petrels displayed their best form of the year last Friday night in defeating Erskine by the one-sided score of 18 to 0. Ansel Paulk had more drive than at any other time this season. The entire left side of the line functioned with more timing than before.

No information has been obtained concerning the Mississippians except the scores made against teams played by the Petrels this year. Several of the men on the team, who will be playing their last game for Oglethorpe this year, are anxious to win these last two games and establish the best record at Oglethorpe in several years.

Coach Patrick intends to drill his team this week on pass defense. He was not satisfied with the number of passes completed against them Friday night and hopes to eliminate that spot which at present seems to be the team's weakest department.

Farley's Offer of Political Job to Prosperous Mauler Passed Up.

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey certainly proved over the weekend that the end he took on the pugilist during his ring career did not leave him "punchy."

I mean the old Manassa Mauler displayed the same old sense in that statement to the press in which he emphatically spiced rumors that he was considering accepting appointment to the New York Boxing Commission or some other political job. These rumors were a result of his vigorous campaigning for President Roosevelt and Governor Lehman.

Because of Dempsey's warm friendship with Big Jim Farley, postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and former chairman of the New York Boxing Commission, it was believed that Farley Promenade that Dempsey was slated to replace one of the three mentors of maul on the commission—a member who had showed Republican leanings during the campaign.

RICH REWARDS. But the former champion's nationwide popularity is bringing him rich rewards. He is knocking them dead with his restaurant and other enterprises, just as he used to do in the ring. Yes sir, Mr. Dempsey is sitting right on top of the world, and he would like to keep it that way.

These three men comprise the most important boxing commission in the country. Their rulings are watched closely by other athletic governing organizations throughout the United States—and usually followed. But it is a rare week in which the three men are in agreement. They are made ludicrous in the papers and held up in contempt before the nation—called the "Three Musketeers." "Winkum, Blinky and Nod," etc., etc. They have been accused of this and that. Outraged citizens, reading the papers, have demanded investigations, house cleanings, etc.

NO SALARY. There is no salary connected with the job. It is supposed to be a political stepping stone. Big Jim Farley used it as such. But Jim is a mastermind—and I don't think the postman his day was as storm-swept as now. I mean Dempsey regarded the job as a possible tombstone to popularity instead of a stepping stone.

Jack would have jeopardized his popularity by accepting the job. He would have been on the commission because—next to being manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers—it probably is one of the most thankless jobs in the world. It is a kind of a job where a headache a day pares your friends away. And Jack had enough headaches in the war years to appreciate now the value of hard-won popularity.

There are more bitter boxing and wrestling feuds, promotional wars and newspaper alignments in New York than in any other American city. Newspaper John J. Phelan, D. Walker Wear and Bill Brown are always right on the spot, caught in a withering cross-fire between feuding managers, promoters and writers.

MAULDIN MEETS INDIAN TONIGHT

Gentleman John Mauldin, light-heavyweight champion of the world, will be given a severe test in more ways than one when he tackles the wild Indian grappler, "Chippewa" Charlie McClain, in the main match at the new Spring Street arena tonight.

The Indian is a capable rope-walker and often jumps to the ropes and springs back on his opponent, knocking him down. Then he applies a quick body blow to gain a fast finish. McClain, the best of the world, in a title bout which lasted two hours at Charlotte, N. C. He wrestled Al Santell two hours to a draw just after Santell had gone five hours against Joe Stetler at Freeman, Neb., for the heavyweight championship.

John Ellis, the New York Greek wrestler, one of the best of the world, will meet Tony Papalino, Italian, in the semi-final. Ellis has defeated in the past few years Fritz Hanson, middleweight champion of the world, in a title bout which lasted two hours at Charlotte, N. C. He wrestled Al Santell two hours to a draw just after Santell had gone five hours against Joe Stetler at Freeman, Neb., for the heavyweight championship.

Papalino has not been defeated since coming here, and his match with Ellis should be top. Bad Boy Brown, a newcomer here from Canada, will meet John Damron, Kirkwood star, in the opening match at 8 o'clock. The new Spring Street arena is located at Spring, Peters and Garnett streets. It has a seating capacity of 1,500 and will be well heated.

Mozley Tomcats Tie Wolves, 6 to 6

The Mozley Park Tomcats and the Howell Park Wolves played a 6-to-6 tie Sunday afternoon at Mozley Park.

The Tomcats, using a "razzle-dazzle" play, scored in the first three minutes of the game. The Wolves scored their only touchdown in the third period.

Grogan, Pope, Howell and Brenner were outstanding for the Tomcats, and Reynolds and Elrod played best for the Wolves.

A gallery of approximately 500 people saw the game. A return game between the two teams, to be played at Mozley park, is pending.

Florida Star Praises Georgia's Great Play

Tiger Mayberry Never Saw Such Guard, Tackle Play He Says Following Game

By Thad Holt.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Nov. 8.—Tiger Mayberry, backfield ace of the Florida football team, said today he had never faced such guard and tackle play as the Georgia team presented in the game.

"I think Georgia had at least one man on our backfield on every play. That fellow Bill Badgett, together with Red Milton, Don Leeburn, Stogie Davis, Peter Tinsley—say, how many good guards and tackles does Georgia have?—not to mention Hall and a couple of others, really deserve a lot of credit.

GREAT JOB. "And I'm telling you Georgia really did a great job of covering punts. I never had a chance. I don't know what happened to arouse Georgia like that, but I've never faced such tackling and blocking before."

Mayberry, a Daytona Beach boy home for the week end, also praised the splendid play of Bill Hartman, and the work of Andy Rodenberry and Coot Vandiver.

"Say, I understand that Vandiver had never played a college game before. All I can say is Coach Harry Mehre must have had a stroke of genius using him against us. He took us completely by surprise on that first pass. We didn't know he was a left-hander.

"Georgia would have scored no matter who threw the ball, I believe, because we got crossed up on the blocking."

Mayberry threw a pass to Watson Ramsey for Florida's only touchdown. And he would have been gone to glory on a cut-back play later if he had been given any blocking.

PLUGGED GAP. Coach Mehre said last night he put Leeburn into the game to play maybe five minutes. Leeburn played 20. He came up with a surprising exhibition of guard play.

In retrospect, thinking things over in more calm manner, perhaps, the idea continues to persist that maybe that was the greatest Georgia team, after all.

Josh Cody thought so, and, looking back, the picture still persists. The Bulldogs were practically letter-perfect in their blocking. There was no desperate do-or-die play. A desperate team does not play with the coolness and precision of the Georgia team of Saturday, as Coach Mehre later ventured.

Wild Bill Hartman credited the play of the Bulldogs to the team spirit. He said the team was in a mind to win an eye and if one has a mind has the Bulldogs were practically letter-perfect in their blocking. There was no desperate do-or-die play. A desperate team does not play with the coolness and precision of the Georgia team of Saturday, as Coach Mehre later ventured.

DUKE, TARHEELS IN CRUCIAL GAME NEXT SATURDAY

Win for Devils Would Virtually Assure Another S. C. Title.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Duke University's mighty Blue Devils had only two more barriers to smash today to reach the Southern conference championship for the second consecutive year.

North Carolina, unbeaten and four times a winner in the conference, was the major obstacle confronting Coach Wallace Wade's spectacular blue eleven. The Tar Heels and Duke clash at Chapel Hill Saturday.

The Blue Devils will rest on the following week-end and close their season on Thanksgiving against a North Carolina State team which on the basis of its record should not endanger Duke's title hopes.

The Tar Heels, however, will meet both South Carolina and Virginia after the "crucial" encounter this week-end. The North State team is expected to have little trouble from the foe.

DAVIDSON EASY.

The difficulty which many predicted Davidson would make for North Carolina yesterday failed to develop as the Tar Heels rolled impressively over the Wildcats by 26-6. Coach Ray Wolf's squad has come along rapidly, showing improvement in each succeeding contest and should be at its peak against the Blue Devils.

Duke likewise routed a strong state rival, Wake Forest, by 20-0.

The victory was the fifth in the conference for the Blue Devils, who have amassed 130 points against none for their opponents.

V. M. I.'s sophomore-dominated squad, which was in the thick of the take-off this season, was flying smoothly in third place in the conference standing as the result of an easy 21-0 win over William and Mary. The triumph was the fourth for the Keydets, who have been beaten only by Davidson.

GREAT GUCKEYSON.

Bill Guckeyson turned in one of the best individual performances in the conference yesterday when he galloped away for two 66-yard touchdowns, enabling Maryland to upset Richmond, 12-0. The V. M. I. Vipers had previously defeated Virginia and V. P. I. but lost to North Carolina on the sidelines on account of injuries.

Maryland will entertain V. M. I. Saturday at College Park in a clash which will offer the Keydets an opportunity by winning to move to second place on the conference ladder.

North Carolina advanced in the Clemson state race by trouncing the Citadel, 20-0.

Three intersectional decisions went against conference teams. North Carolina State bowed to Boston College, 7-3, after putting up a real battle; South Carolina lost to V. M. I. by a fine team, 14-0, and Harvard swamped Virginia, 65-0. Furman beat Presbyterian, 14-0, Friday night.

Hey, Hey! Fumble! Fumble!

You might live the rest of your life without seeing such a rare football picture as this one. It all happened in the Holy Cross-Colgate game at Worcester, Mass., which Holy Cross won, 20 to 13. A Colgate man has just fumbled a punt and Mautner, of Holy Cross (with arms outstretched), is trying to grab the ball. But Burke, of Colgate (lying nearest Mautner), booted the ball away and it finally landed in the arms of Shields (No. 30), of Holy Cross. Associated Press photo.

Raines To Seek Title Against Detton Friday

Dick Raines meets the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, Dean Detton, the Utah wonder boy, at the Atlanta theater next Friday night. It ranks as probably the most important heavyweight title match in Atlanta's history. Raines, the untamed Texan, long has been called the uncrowned champion by many mat experts. This match supplies the answer.

In bringing Detton here, Speer has signed wrestling's newest and greatest sensation. They're calling the Utah boy a second Goliath and a greater wrestler than Jimmy Lewis.

Detton, who first broke into the national spotlight last year by pinning Ed (Strangler) Lewis in the finals of an elimination tournament in Philadelphia, won the championship several weeks ago from Dave Levin in masterly fashion. He uses the same step-over toe hold that made Frank Gotch a terror of the mat. Many old timers agree he uses it better.

Raines, riding on the crest of a victory, will have a long line of victims in his wake, qualified for the title shot Friday night by subduing brilliant Orville Brown. He did it in the usual way—fouls, power-house methods and questionable tactics. It will be interesting to see how far he is able to go with those same tactics against this rascal's fool from Utah.

The Atlanta theater affords an ideal setup for winter shows. Speer has the ring situated in such a way that it is easily visible from any section of the building. It is a foregone conclusion that this title match will pack the place, but it also is certain all occupants will be afforded a full view of the proceedings.

Speer is working on his supporting card and will have an announcement regarding the preliminaries at an early date.

Meanwhile, tickets will go on sale early in the week at Marshall and Reynolds.

SOUTHEASTERN CHICAGO BEARS BATTER GIANTS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Representatives of baseball interests from four southern cities conferred here today, in an effort to revive the Southeastern league.

Babe Ganzel, former major league player, was selected chairman of a promotional committee.

Pensacola, Mobile, Montgomery and Selma already have begun arrangements to put a club in the league, Ganzel said.

Ganzel said that Harry Hatcher, of Jacksonville, will operate the Montgomery club if the league is organized, and that John Barbee, also of Jacksonville, is willing to buy a franchise in "any city" in the circuit.

Maurice I. Bloch, of Selma, said that major league backing could be obtained for a club there.

Other prospective members of the league are Anniston and Bessemer, Ala.; Rome, Ga.; and Meridian and Hattiesburg, Miss.

WINS MARATHON.

EMPIRE CITY RACE TRACK, YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Mel Porter, veteran Newark, N. J., runner, won the annual Yonkers marathon today. Porter led a field of 51 starters through the wet, hilly course to finish 300 yards ahead of Gerald Cote, of Montreal. Porter's winning time was 2:41:33.8. Cote was clocked in 2:42:23.

The fourth game saw the Chicago Cardinals chalk up their first victory of the season, turning back the other tail-enders, Philadelphia, 13-0.

Mud and rain apparently had little effect upon the Bears' offense as Bronko Nagurski crashed through the Giant line and Bernie Masterson twice crossed the goal on short runs and finished 300 yards ahead of Gerald Cote, of Montreal. Porter's winning time was 2:41:33.8. Cote was clocked in 2:42:23.

Redskins, who scored first on Riley Smith's field goal after a long march, Green Bay struck through the air to win a 55-yard advance of the third quarter, ended with a Flash Herber-Don Hutson pass for the touchdown.

An upset in the American Pro league checked the victory march of the Boston Shamrocks. The Pittsburgh Americans, with Halback Dick Belz and Bob Snyder producing touchdowns, downed the Shamrocks, 14-6, preventing the Boston outfit from clinching the loop's first pennant.

In the day's other game, the Cleveland Rams scored to take place by noosing out the Brooklyn Tigers, 15-14.

Pittsburgh steam-rolled Penn State, 34 to 7, and now points for Nebraska, the Big Six leader and unquestionably one of the country's top-ranking teams. The battle at Lincoln looked as if it would be a close intersectional "natural," with Pitt's Marshall Goldberg and Nebraska's Sam Francis matching All-American claims.

Dartmouth gained undisputed possession of the eastern "Ivy League" lead by outscoring Columbia, 20 to 13, with an impressive display of power but the Big Green cannot claim the mythical title until it disposes of Cornell and Princeton.

Holy Cross, toppled by Temple from the unbeaten class last week, rebounded at the expense of Colgate, 20 to 13. Georgetown, undefeated, tied by New York University, achieved its most convincing victory of the season by downing West Virginia, 28 to 0.

Colorado's surprisingly decisive victory over Utah, 31-7, established the Buffaloes solidly on top of the Rocky Mountain conference heap for the time being. Utah State kept in the running, however, with a 13-0 victory over Colorado State and will challenge the pace-setters this week.

Butler Grid Captain Killed; Cager Hurt

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—(AP)—In two separate automobile accidents Saturday night the captain of the Butler University football team was killed and the basketball team captain was injured critically.

Spero Costas, 21, of Canton, Ill., the football captain, was killed at Crawfordville, Ind., while en route to his home with four companions for a week-end trip.

Arthur Cosgrove, 25, captain of the 1936-37 basketball team, received a fractured skull and other injuries when two automobiles collided at a street intersection here. The accident in which Cosgrove was injured followed that in which Costas died.

Only a few hours.

WEST'S CHOICE IS UNCERTAIN AFTER UPSETS

L. S. U. Still in Running on Eastern Side, As Is Nebraska.

By Alan Gould.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Inventory of college football's latest upsets today featured (1) restoration of eastern prestige, largely at the expense of midwestern rivals (2) elevation of Fordham and Alabama to ranking positions as Rose Bowl contenders, (3) explosive come-backs by such powerhouse as Minnesota and Princeton, and (4) spread of the upset fever from the southwest to the far west in epidemic form.

Fordham's decisive 15-0 victory over Purdue not only topped one of the east's best afternoons in intercollegiate competition but strengthened the bid of the iron-bound Rams to consideration for Pasadena's post-season plum.

Simultaneously, Alabama's rout of the hitherto unbeaten Tulane outfit, 34-7, emphasized the prowess and prospects of the crimson Tide. Alabama has been the Rose Bowl choice four times, with three victories and a tie to show for its efforts within the past decade.

Fordham never has had a bid from the west coast.

UP TO COMMITTEE.

Since there is comparatively little doubt that both Fordham and Alabama will survive their remaining two tests successfully, the ultimate decision may depend on whether the Rose Bowl sponsors want a new-come from the big city or an aggregation that has proved its drawing power, as well as its playing ability, in action.

The Rams of Rose Hill, tied only by Pittsburgh and boasting three intercollegiate conquests at the expense of St. Mary's, Southern Methodist, and Purdue, must hurdle Georgia and New York University to remain undefeated. Alabama, tied by Tennessee, figures to dispose of Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt.

Others who may figure in the post-season picture include Louisiana State, Nebraska and Marquette. The Tigers maintained their undisputed Southeastern conference lead yesterday by beating Louisiana State, 10 to 0, but they do not meet Alabama.

Nebraska, which routed Kansas by 26-0, girds itself for this week's headlining engagement, with Pittsburgh at Lincoln. The Huskers move to the west coast to tackle Oregon State two weeks later.

Marquette kept its slate clean by rallying to a 7 to 6 win, but lost some prestige and isn't likely to hear the siren call from the coast unless a lot of things happen to other contenders.

HUSKIES TIED.

Meantime the far western leaders all experienced enough troubles of their own to make the eastern Rose Bowl choice a matter of secondary consideration. Washington's Huskies, hard-pressed to gain a 14-14 tie with the rapidly-improving Stanford team, remain on top of the Pacific Coast conference.

The principal rivals, Southern California and Washington State, met with upsets.

California's Golden Bears, beaten in four of their previous five starts, passed their way to a stunning conquest of Southern California, 13 to 7. Oregon State, linked in three of its previous four defeats, achieved a reversal to wallop Washington State, 16 to 6. This thoroughly scrambled state of affairs is due to an unscrupulous, but not dishonest, play.

Speaking of upsets the Southwest conference produced its full weekly quota and turned the championship game into a rodeo. Southern Methodist, which moved into the favorite's position, was thrashed by Texas, 40 to 0, and the tune of 22 to 6, with Jim Shockey pitching touchdowns.

Sammy Haugh had his second big day in a superior role as the Bears' quarterback, leading the team to a 25-0 victory over the Gophers simply had an off day when their winning streak was broken by Northwestern. The Gophers can't throw that one out, but they're beaten with a 14-14 tie.

As expected by all Big Ten observers, Iowa was the luckless victim of Minnesota's desire to demonstrate that the Gophers simply had an off day when their winning streak was broken by Northwestern. The Gophers can't throw that one out, but they're beaten with a 14-14 tie.

Hornsby Stays As Pilot, Won't Cut in Profits

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—(UP)—Donald L. Barnes, stocky, 43-year-old president of the American Investment Company and prospective president and major owner of the St. Louis Browns, confirmed today that all details for purchase of the club from the Phil Ball estate had been completed. Formal announcement will be made at the American league meeting in Chicago next Thursday, he said.

"Until then," Barnes said, "I do not care to discuss details since we must wait approval by the other owners before the deal can become official."

G-MEN TAB 5 WOMEN IN 5-ROOM APARTMENT

Widow Held on Mann Act Charges; Wealthy Clients Reported.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Department of Justice investigators announced today the arrest on Mann act charges of Lucille Malin, 35, widow of Jean Malin, female impersonator.

Rhea Whitley, agent in charge of the bureau, said Mrs. Malin and five girls were taken into custody in a fast night on an apartment in a fashionable East Side neighborhood.

Four of the girls were found in the apartment, Whitley said, and the fifth, listed as Marcia Miller, 26, was taken into custody as she stepped from a Rolls-Royce attired in evening gown and ermine wrap.

The other girls, Whitley said, gave their names as Helen Thomas, 32; Mary Walsh, 25; Vivian Bennett, 22, and Joyce Dean, 26.

A negro maid was held for questioning.

Whitley said that a man in the apartment and several other men who appeared at the place after the raid began were questioned but were not held.

Special agents of the federal bureau have been investigating Mrs. Malin's activities for several months. They said she maintained apartment in several exclusive neighborhoods and at one time lived in a "luxuriously furnished" apartment in Central Park West where she paid a rental of $10,000 a year.

The warrant on which Mrs. Malin was arrested, Whitley said, specifically charged that she sent girls to entertain last January for purposes of prostitution.

Whitley described Mrs. Malin as "the largest call house operator in New York."

"She is known to have sent girls from her establishment to fill dates with men of prominence in various cities throughout the east," he continued.

"Among the inducements she held out to girls working for her were that the girls would meet men of the highest social standing and thereby find affluent husbands."

The federal agent said Mrs. Mal

INSTALLMENT XII.

"Not so good, Shane O'Hara," she averred, shaking her head, so that the adorable dark curls danced blithely. "Not so good. You see what I mean? Public thought is not noted for depth: it's ability to put two and two together and make eight or ten has been proved. Not so good."

"You mean," offered Shane, glad that this girl was concerned about him, regretting that they were not talking of matters more pleasant, "you mean there will be those who will say that I did—him—take possession over his dead body?"

"Right," said the girl. "They'll say you had a motive and opportunity—and because Don Fernando forgot his cigar case, you haven't got an alibi to offer. Not so good."

Somewhat belatedly, Shane thought, the idea was beginning to get across to him that he might become involved in this business more deeply than had at first seemed possible. Perception of this fact was like a little blow in the wind.

"You don't think—" he began, but bit back his words. As if he'd been sitting here in a rose garden with him, analyzing the situation, if she thought he had killed Black Sam Verdugo!

"Don't be silly," said Rose, understanding him. "Granddaddy would have known it the minute he saw you—if you had shot Black Sam."

"Oh!" exclaimed Shane, doubtfully. "You're just taking Don Timoteo's judgment, then?"

"Maybe," said Rose shortly. "It's good enough for me. And Mister O'Hara, if he offers to use any of that same judgment in your behalf, don't refuse it. Don't turn it down. Your granddaddy is a very wise old owl."

"He's certainly been kind to me," said Shane. "But look here, Miss—Miss Rose, I don't like this at all, at all, now that I see it closer. I'm just getting you folks all entangled in a mess that will bother you. I think—yes—I think I had better go away from Soledad."

Rose Delane sniffed.

"A fat chance you've got! To go away before the inquest. And as for afterwards... I don't like it. I don't like it!"

"Don't you worry your pretty head about me," begged Shane, sincerity in his voice. "I'll be all right. I'll go and tell Mr. Coroner just what happened. And there'll be Don Fernando to give evidence that when we took our ride in the hills I certainly didn't act as if I'd just killed a man."

The girl rose, shook her skirt into place, fingered her hair, looked at the young man oddly.

"I wish I knew just what Don Fernando will say," she said. And then, before Shane could ask what she implied, walked away.

Shane studied her last remark, but could make no sense out of it. There was only one thing Don Fernando could say.

Arriving at the house, Rose made her way upstairs to a room from which came boys' voices discussing stamps with earnestness.

"Hello, sis," Teddy greeted her from his chair on one side of a table covered with stamp albums and stamps and hinges and envelopes and catalogs—all the trappings of philately. "You're looking as fresh as when I shot him!"

Dick Truesdale grinned amiably at her, threw her a "Hello, Rose."

Rose sat down on the couch.

"How are you feeling today, Teddy?" she asked, after returning Dick's greeting. "Okay?"

"Okay Number One," replied Teddy. "He was a cheerful soul, for a lad with a bum leg, she told herself for the ten-thousandth time. Never a whine nor a whimper out of him. She was proud of him. But she couldn't picture Don Timoteo's grandson having a yellow streak."

"Just dropped in to say hello," she offered. "Been getting an earful about the shooting of Black Sam. Of course you've heard."

Two heads nodded assent.

"Not much loss to the community, is it?" asked Dick, with the callousness of youth.

"Oh, Black Sam wasn't so bad,"

the procedure, what was expected of them.

The six jurors now knew, as they took their seats in the musty front room of the ranchhouse at La Paloma, that one thing was certain: Deceased had come to his death through a pistol bullet, fired into his back, by a party or parties.

But there was more than that to this business; that they also understood.

There was the question of why Sam Verdugo had been shot through the back, and who had fired the shot. The question, too, was it premeditated murder? Was it the result of a fight?

Answers to these questions would come out at the hearing. They always did.

Coroner Eckhart took his seat—an armchair, as became his greater dignity—at the table looked into the middle of the room, moved at the jury-men to his left, the group of witnesses and spectators to his right, cleared his throat. He was a short, stocky man, well advanced in years which had left their stamp upon his shoulders, wrinkled around calm gray eyes which had looked untold times upon violent death—and still had no opinions as to why men do these things.

"Dr. Marks," he said, and a young man separated himself from the spectators and came forward to take the chair placed for the witnesses. He was duly sworn, and identified himself.

"You have examined the body of the deceased," continued the coroner mildly. "Will you give your opinion as to the cause of death?"

"There can be no question," said the doctor, "that deceased came to his death as the result of a bullet which passed through his back, through his heart, and then through his breast, in the order stated."

"Did you find the bullet, doctor, when you examined the deceased?"

"I did not. It had penetrated his clothes and passed on."

"Could you state the probable caliber of the bullet?"

"I would say that it was a .32 caliber, of high penetrating power. Perhaps a .38, although I am inclined to think not."

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

When An Extra Guest Turns Up at the Last Minute, It Calls for Ingenuity.

This extra guest problem has all kinds of answers. But one of our friends, who prides herself on her soups, has thought of the best one we've heard yet. It takes, we'll admit, a certain strain of high-grade unpleasantness to act upon it. But we consider it a masterful solution to the how-to-make-the-soup-go-around problem.

The point is our friend's soup is so excellent, and so carefully measured, that it usually just goes neatly around. She refuses to water it when she has to make it go for one more. And she hates to skimp on every one. So she rushes out just before dinner is served, and brews herself a cup of tea and matches it, shade for shade with the soup.

She says the system works splendidly. The only trouble she has is about the salt. She has to keep refusing it.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

STORIES OF ADVENTURE.

1—Adrift on the Sea.

A little more than five centuries ago, a Venetian merchant set out on a voyage. His name was Peter Quirini, and his plan was to take a cargo of cotton and wine to Flanders, or Belgium, as the land is known today.

After pausing at Cadiz, in southern Spain, the vessel caught in a fierce storm which drove it westward and northward. The helm was broken, and the sailors had no way of steering. Day after day, the winds kept blowing and the rain kept beating down. The helm was repaired, but soon was broken again.

When all the wine was gone, a sailor caught sight of an island which looked like a mass of snow-covered rocks. Hour after hour the thirsty men reached the island shore. Some leapt from the boat, and ran to obtain snow, which the swallowed as fast as it would melt in their mouths.

Only 13 men reached that island. It was a barren place, but it contained an old hut which could be used for shelter. By wading into the water, the sailors were able to obtain small shellfish, and they also ate seaweed. It seemed better to be on the island than in the open sea.

One day men wading in the water looking for shellfish caught sight of a big fish, weighing about 200 pounds which had been washed ashore by the tide. They raced to the fish, and found it perfectly fresh. It supplied food for all for four days.

That was one piece of good fortune, but it was followed by another—fishermen came to the island, and rescued the men, taking them to their homes on another island, where they spent the winter. They found they had drifted far up into the North Sea. In the spring Quirini and his sailors obtained southward passage on a sailing vessel, and were able to return safely to their homes.
